TIME, READER'S DIGEST

Tax Privileges Abolished

OTTAWA — Time magazine and Reader's Digest will be stripped by the end of the year of special tax privileges which allow them to compete with Canadian periodicals, State Secretary Hugh Faulkner announced today.

Faulkner told the Commons the Income Tax Act will be amended to withdraw the provision which permits Time and Readers's Digest, alone among foreign magazines, to share with Canadian publications a tax deductibility provision on advertising.

Canadian firms advertising in Canadian magazines are allowed, in calculating income tax, to deduct the costs of these advertisements at 100 per cent.

Under present law they can do the same with the cost of their advertisements in Time and Reader's Digest, which are foreign magazines.

The minister also said the Income Tax Act would soon be amended so Canadian advertising on U.S. border television stations beaming into Canada will no longer be deductible from a sponsor's income tax.

In this area, the main company affected by the proposed changes is KVOS-TV, a Bellingham-based station which derives most of its revenue from Vancouver advertisers.

Dave Mintz, president of the company, told The Times from Vancouver today that he did not feel the proposed changes would have the desired effect.

"It's not going to put us out of business," he said.

"All we'll do is readjust our rates to cover the tax difference and still be sold out of advertising time. "It'll hurt the advertiser more than us."

Mintz expressed "hurt" at the way the change was announced.

"We've been in B.C. since 1953," he said, "and tried to act as we felt the government wanted.

"We've hired Canadians, and our executives are all Canadians or landed immigrants, we've reinvested our profits in Canda and what's more we've paid Canadian income tax — not U.S. — on every cent of revenue we've made in Canada."

Faulkner said that when the special tax concession was implemented, it was designed to encourage development of a magazine industry in Canada, but the industry is still U.S.-dominated.

TAXPAYERS TAKE POOL PLUNGE

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The Canadian taxpayer could end up paying as much as half the cost of Prime Minister Trudeau's $200,000 swimming pool.

This was revealed Wednesday when it became known that the anonymous group of donors who are paying for the pool will be able to claim the donations under the gift tax provisions of the Income Tax Act.

If all 25 of the donors are in a sufficiently-high income tax bracket this will lop a considerable amount from the bite they pay the federal treasury.

A spokesman for the donors, Dr. W. H. Fader of Toronto confirmed Wednesday that some of the donors were aware that they could claim a tax deduction before they made the commitment to the pool.

Two MPs, meanwhile, tried without success to determine in the Commons Wednesday exactly who is paying for the pool.

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) called for an investigation to determine the names of the private donors financing the 20-foot by 40-foot enclosed pool.

His motion, requiring unanimous consent to come to a vote, was lost in a chorus of "Nos" from Liberal MPs.

A similar attempt by Tom Cossitt (PC—Leeds) was ruled out of order by Speaker James Jerome.

Knowles said outside the Commons that the public has a right to know who the contributors are and whether any potential conflict of interest might occur.

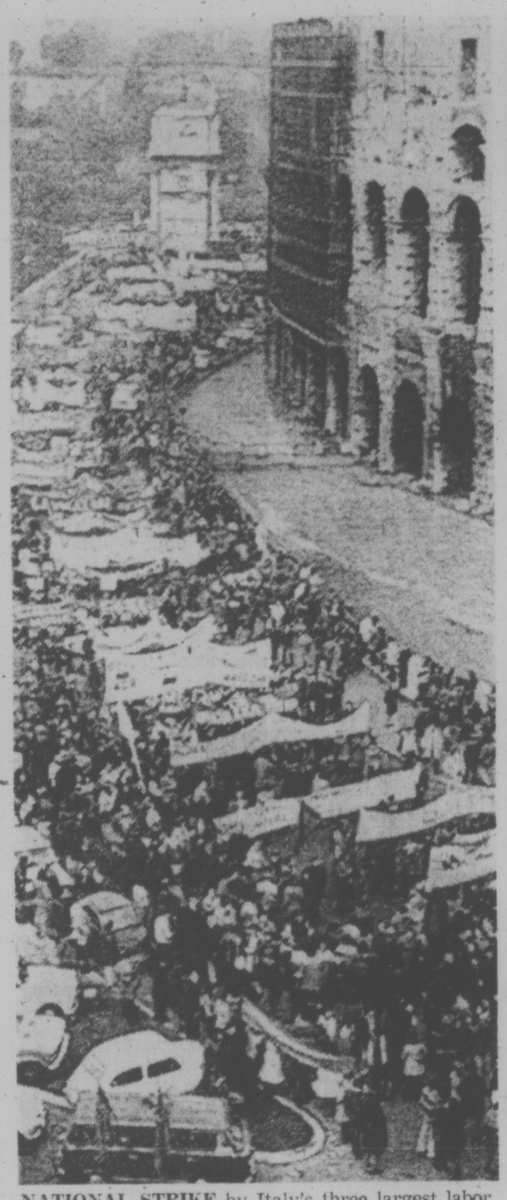
Trudeau said last week he does not know, and does not want to find out, who the donors are.

Officials say the pool will serve Trudeau and future prime ministers.

Knowles said the pool should be financed with public money to eliminate suspicion.

It was just as wrong for Trudeau to accept a privately-financed pool as it was for Health Minister Marc Lalonde to accept a free trip to Israel on a Seagram's Distillers jet last year, he added.



NATIONAL STRIKE by Italy's three largest labor unions creates massive traffic jams in Rome but fails to have much other effect. Crowd estimated at 200,000 marches past the Colosseum today on its way to a rally to press demands for cost-of-living and pension increases as well as a guaranteed annual wage.

CIA Spies 'In Canada'

TORONTO (CP) — Edmonton publisher Mel Hurtig said Wednesday that at least 50 spies from the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) of the United States have worked in Canada with the full knowledge and co-operation of the RCMP.

Mr. Hurtig, founder of the Committee for an Independent Canada, told the local committee chapter that the CIA also has field officers working as attaches and counsul-generals in Toronto, Calgary and Vancouver.

He said a Canadian security organization—the police and security planning and analysis group—knows about the operations and they "open their files" to the CIA.

Mr. Hurtig said Col. Robert Bourne, assistant deputy minister in charge of the security group which is under the federal solicitor-general's department, "regularly makes his secret files available to the CIA."

He said in an interview later that his information about the RCMP, the CIA and Col. Bourne will be given to Solicitor-General Warren Allmand today.

He produced a typewritten list which he said contained names of all CIA agents "working under the guise of legal or cultural affairs at U.S. consulates in Canada."

Mr. Hurtig refused to reveal the names, which he said were given to him Wednesday by a Montreal newspaper, saying the paper planned to print the list next Thursday.

Although Mr. Hurtig would not reveal the source of his information, he said it came from a friend with a high-level contact inside the police and security group.

He said Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau misled the public when he declared three years ago that there were no CIA agents in Canada.

"Anyone who believes that the CIA would not infiltrate a country like Canada where the U.S. has enormous assets, is very naive," the publisher said.

He said the remedy to the infiltration is for the RCMP "to do its job."

Canada's police and security planning and analysis group was set up three years ago to receive and evaluate information from the RCMP, the armed forces and external affairs.

NEWS BRIEFS

Swarm of Quakes Rattles California

BRAWLEY, Calif. (UPI) — A "swarm" of strong earthquakes jolted southern California early today, less than 12 hours after another milder tremor shook residents of Santa Monica and Malibu.

The swarm, the term used by seismologists for a series of quakes, began at 4:30 a.m. and ranged in magnitude from 3.7 to 4.3 on the Richter Scale, according to the seismology laboratory at Caltech in Pasadena.

Mortgage Rate Cut

OTTAWA (CP) — Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. (CMHC) reduced its mortgage lending rate today to 10¾ per cent from 11¼ per cent for loans to house buyers under the Assisted Home Ownership Program (AHOP).

Weekly Pay Rises

OTTAWA (CP) — Average weekly earnings of more than four millon workers rose 13.8 per cent during the 12 months to November last year, outstripping the 12-per-cent increase in consumer prices in the corresponding period, Statistics Canada reported Wednesday.

More Families Move

ASBESTOS, Que. (CP) — Another 25 families are expected to move out today after four homes slithered into a 950-foot open-pit asbestos mine Wednesday. About 50 families were evacuated earlier. A seven-block area of the town's main street has been blocked off and police are guarding against the looting of abandoned homes.

Mint Talks Break

OTTAWA (CP)—Negotiations between the Royal Canadian Mint and the Public Service Alliance, representing 550 striking workers, broke off again Wednesday. The employees have been on strike since Jan. 9 in mint offices at Ottawa, Hull, Que., and Winnipeg and the walkout has halted production of coins.

U.K. Vote on ECM

LONDON (UPI)—Prime Minister Harold Wilson plans to call a natonal referendum this summer to dicide whether Britain should remain in the nine-nation European Common Market. Government officials said Wilson will announce plans for the referendum this afternoon in a statement to parliament.

ENOUGH!

In council debate on granting $143 to Vancouver Island Publicity Bureau, Coleman said:

"The philosophy is this — do we want any more people wandering around the Island? I say the answer is a firm no." He said there are "too many people on the Island already. We should be looking at ways to keep tourists away."

He was the only objector and the grant — up $33 over 1974 — passed council.

Municipal Lockout Not for 2 Weeks

A lockout of Greater Victoria municipal and school board employees appears impossible for at least two weeks.

Mediation officer Clark Gilmour has tentative meetings scheduled for this period with almost all the groups involved in current bargaining for new contracts.

He submitted his report to Labor Minister Bill King Wednesday regarding the city outside workers but not in the other disputes.

A decision by the municipalities and school board to lock out all employees if there is a single strike cannot be implemented until the mediation officer has withdrawn, according to the Labor Act.

The 280 city outside workers, members of CUPE Local 50, have posted strike notice and will be free to strike as soon as King notifies the local he has received Gilmour's report.

Local 50 president Jim Walker said no decision has been made when to strike the city and no decision will be made until King says he has received Gilmour's report.

King is expected to communicate receipt of Gilmour's report within a few days.

Gilmour is still the mediation officer in disputes involving the Greater Victoria school board, Victoria inside staff, Capital Regional District, Saanich, Sidney, Esquimalt and Oak Bay.

He said the cheques should have been delivered this morning but workers were told they would get them at 4 p.m., after banks closed. He said he was contacting the labor department about this.

However, a payroll department spokesman said Walker's accusation was "rubbish."

"He's talking through his hat. We had a breakdown in the computer last night. They worked last night, corrected it, the cheques were run this morning and they've all been delivered," he said.

Record Donations To USC Campaign

The Unitarian Service Committee annual campaign in Greater Victoria, sponsored for the past 21 years by the Victoria Times, has been officially closed with a record total of contributions — $21,427.39.

That surpasses the best previous year by almost $5,000.

But it falls a little short of the target, which was $22,785, the cost of buying, insuring and shipping a 36,000-pound carload of powdered milk to famine-struck Bangladesh.

"May I, through you, send a jubilant, very, very warm 'thank you' to all your readers who dipped into their pockets to send lifesaving Canadian milk to the starving children in Bangladesh."

Contributions, big and small, came from all corners of the community. A note with a recent donation of $5 reads simply:

"From Mark, David and Jennifer, who went without dinner."

Despite an official end to the campaign, there is a chance the total could yet hit the target.

A UVic professor who wishes to remain anonymous has challenged students to contribute $500. If they do, he will add $100 and is confident other faculty members will donate as well.

Since 1953, Times readers have contributed a total of $239,622.95.

Knight Seeks Unemployment Insurance

Dr. Stanley Knight, deposed director of the education department's research and development division, will start receiving unemployment insurance benefits in late February.

Knight filed his application for benefits today and was told he would start receiving $113 a week on Feb. 21.

During his six months as division director he received $498 a week.

Under the terms of unemployment insurance, Knight must seek three jobs a week, and he told reporters he listed his preferences as director of a research and development division, president of a university, or dean of education.

Gov't Aid Sought By Park Villages

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

UCLUELET — Tofino and Ucluelet spokesmen Wednesday demanded senior government assistance to help the heavily burdened villages provide services to the thousands of visitors to the Long Beach section of Pacific Rim National Park.

The plea was made at a public meeting attended by officials from Parks Canada regional headquarters in Calgary. The meeting — and another tonight at Tofino — was held to discuss this year's development plans at Long Beach.

The federal parks branch plans to spend $3.2 million on the whole of the park which includes the Broken Islands and the West Coast Trail between Bamfield and Port Renfrew.

Of this sum, $1.7 million will be for land acquisition within the park at Long Beach and the Broken Islands.

In addition, $1.1 million will be used for upgrading park facilities at Long Beach.

Despite these expenditures, aldermen and mayors of the two communities said the senior governments are not helping the villages cope with the annual influx.

Ken Gibson, deputy mayor of Tofino, said the village faces a severe water problem.

"Why should we pay to improve our water services for people who come to visit the park," he asked.

Ucluelet Mayor Bob Russell said that basically residents are involved in logging and fishing.

"We haven't the funds to pay the expenses for sewage and garbage disposal for all the people who come here."

Refunds Under Fire

The provincial consumer services department has again launched an attack on the escalating number of instant income tax refund firms, cropping up around B.C.

Consumer Services Minister Phyllis Young Wednesday predicted a dramatic increase in the number of people using the refund firms this year because of deteriorating economic conditions.

She said she will push for the federal government to introduce legislation cutting refund firms "off at the knees" or outlaw the tax refund scheme.

In the meantime, her department is hoping that complaints against the firms will be reported for eventual court action under the Trade Practices Act.

Main complaint is that many of the firms offering "instant" tax refunds give customers only 50 per cent of what the actual refund should be.

A department spokesman said the new scheme is for the firm to give a customer a $50 advance at the time he submits his tax claim. The remainder is directed to the claimant only after the refund is received.

David Morris, department staff solicitor, said the scheme could be interpreted as a loan for which the interest rate can be as high as 4,000 per cent.

Morris cites the example of a person who is entitled to a $500 return who could get as little as $250 from the tax firm.

The firm gives the customer an initial $50 cash and he (the customer) is told that he will get the rest when his refund arrives from Ottawa. At that point the final payment could be only $200.

"In effect, the person pays $250 for a $50 loan for six weeks," Morris said.

EXXON PROFIT LEAPS

NEW YORK (AP) — Exxon Corp., the world's biggest oil company and parent company of Imperial Oil of Canada, announced today fourth-quarter 1974, after-tax earnings climbed 9.3 per cent.

Earnings for the full year were up 28.5 per cent over 1973.

The quarter's net income totalled $860 million, or $3.84 a share, compared with $787 million, or $3.51 a share, in the fourth quarter of 1973—the time when Middle East producers first imposed their oil embargo against the United States and petroleum prices began their upward spiral.

Revenues rose 49 per cent to $12.57 billion, against $8.42 billion in the comparable period last year.

For the full year ended Dec. 31, Exxon said it earned $3.14 billion, or $14.03 a share, compared with 1973's $2.44 billion, or $10.90 a share.

AMIN ASKS QUEEN TO AID OVERTHROW

Times News Services

KAMPALA — Idi Amin wants to go to London to help overthrow the British government — and he wants the Queen to help him.

Radio Kampala Wednesday said that Amin had told the Queen of his planned August visit "so that you may have ample time to arrange all that is required for my comfortable stay in your country."

During the visit he intends to tour all parts of the United Kingdom "to talk to those people who are struggling for self-determination and independence from your political and economic system," the broadcast quoted him as telling the Queen.

Officials in London Wednesday night denied receiving any communication from Amin about any projected visit.

'Why Not' Buttons Sexist, Say MPs

By IAIN HUNTER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Two female Liberal MP's are angrily campaigning against the button which Health Minister Marc Lalonde is peddling to help liberate Canadian women.

Simma Holt (Vancouver-Kingsway) and Iona Campagnolo (Skenna) won't wear theirs and they're not afraid to say "Why Not."

"It's bloody degrading," snapped Mrs. Holt.

She charged that Lalonde has been misled into endorsing the button by his "office full of surrogate wives."

"I consider it to be sexist in tone," declared Mrs. Campagnolo a little more delicately.

The two B.C. MP's said Wednesday that none of the Liberal women in the House of Commons are wearing the button bearing the slogan "Why Not," and they appear to be intimidating their male colleagues to ditch theirs as well.

Even Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, who made a statement in the Commons Wednesday supporting International Women's Year, was not wearing the button given to him by his own health minister.

Detractors of the button claim that the "Why Not" could be taken as an invitation to something other than equality of status.

Mrs. Campagnolo said the button could be taken as having "a sexual connotation."

Both she and Mrs. Holt felt Trudeau was expressing sympathy for their anti-campaign but telling them it was too late to pull back the button.

Meanwhile, unaware that his campaign was going sour in the capital, Lalonde was distributing buttons as fast as he could in the Northwest Territories.

Gov't Sets Condition On Taking Arab Cash

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister John Turner said Wednesday the government would welcome some private investment of Arab money in housing but would not accept loans to government agencies financing housing.

He said he would prefer that any Arab investments of new oil wealth be in the form of mortgages and not purchases of housing here.

Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson said last week that up to $1 billion in Arab money is available for mortgage loans. He had said previously that such money might be funnelled through government agencies or private lenders.

Turner, speaking to reporters outside the Commons, said the government has between $4 billion and $5 billion in its bank accounts and does not need to borrow.

"There's no intention of the government of Canada to borrow in the petrodollar market." Petrodollar is the word formed to describe Arab oil profits since prices have moved sharply higher.

Turner said the government would welcome private investments provided they did not upset currency exchange markets. A rapid influx of foreign currencies might drive up the value of the Canadian dollar, which would affect Canada's foreign trade position.

He declined comment on whether $1 billion would be enough to disrupt currency trading and affect the value of the dollar.

Danson had been asked in the Commons about his statements on loans of Arab money, but said the issue has been passed on to the finance minister.

Later, outside the House, Danson said the government should not have to borrow if the funds are available here.

"I think we have enough at home . . . from government sources, of course, but also from private investors."

Kidnapper Flushed

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Police armed with rifles and using tear gas flushed Donald Wayne Cline out of a townhouse before dawn today, ending a drama that started Tuesday.

Cline, 22, who escaped from prison last October, surrendered quietly after police lobbed tear gas into the house in which he was hiding.

He earlier had released unharmed a 12-year-old boy he had held hostage for 33 hours.

"It went smooth as silk," Police Chief Walter Johnson said moments after the capture. "He came out right away as soon as he knew we meant business."

There was no known connection between Cline and the residents of the house and no other people were found there, police said.

Inspector Jeff Cooper of the Ontario Provincial Police said he did not know how much of the $10,000 ransom was recovered, but Chief Johnson said some cash was found and some money had been burned.

The house, on Boullee Street in the city's north end, was surrounded by police at about 1 a.m.

Police talked with Cline on the telephone and said that during the conversation he held a gun to the throat of a woman. He surrended 45 minutes later.

She later was identified as Gail Guest, a friend who had joined Cline in a farmhouse at Thamesford, Ont., about 15 miles east of London, Tuesday while he was holding four children for ransom.

Both Cline and Miss Guest were taken to police headquarters.

Neighbors had been told by police to take refuge in their basements.

There was no immediate indication of how police discovered where Cline was hiding.

Provincial police said they kept track of Cline's car by using a homing device attached to the vehicle, although after Cline left the car they lost him.

He and Miss Guest left the car in St. Thomas, about 10 miles south of London.

Police said they did not know how Cline and Miss Guest reached London, but Inspector Cooper said "Taxis are cheap and the man had a lot of money."

His hiding place was apparently discovered about 2½ hours after Cline freed Robert Field, 12.

Villages Seek Gov't Aid

al district planner, suggested a special committee be set up to work with the governments.

Jack Holyroyd, parks superintendent, said the parks branch did not have the authority to spend money outside the park.

"But there are other government agencies which can do this," he said.

He suggested that Tofino and Ucluelet approach the provincial government for financial assistance.

"From there the province could discuss the matter with the federal government," he said.

There was some opposition at the meeting to the closure, possibly within a year, of the beach for camping.

There appeared no opposition to the use of Long Beach as a driveway for cars.

"I like seclusion," said one resident. "I like to camp on the beach alone. Why can't I do this?"

Chief park planner Peter Matrosovs of Calgary said if one person is allowed, everyone must be allowed.

"How are you going to be able to enjoy solitude if there are 10,000 other campers beside you?"

Another resident noted that other national parks allow wilderness camping.

Matrosovs observed that other parks like Banff are much larger. It has 5,120,000 acres, he said. The Long Beach area has only 33,000 acres and much is not usuable because of swamps.

Holyroyd said the Broken Islands and the lifesaving trial were for back packers, walkers and wilderness seekers.

The Long Beach area is too small, he added, and it is being developed for car-orientted visitors. The private sector would provide the camping sites outside the park.

William Turnbull, director of the western region of Parks Canada, said once a park is overused it is finished.

"You can't throw the park away and get a new one like you can a broken piece of china," he said. "Once it is ruined it remains that way."

In an interview before the meeting, chief planner Matrasovs said camping in Long Beach will continue until alternative private camping facilities are available adjacent to the park.

He said a privately-operated 500-site campground north of the park will probably open this summer, if water supply problems are resolved. If the campground is opened, the beach will be closed to automobiles and overnight caping, he said.

The Green Point campground on a bluff overlooking the park will be developed for continued use as an overnight campground, while other areas of the park will be developed for day use only.

Green Point will be the centre of development this year, if the park budget is approved by Parliament and enough skilled manpower is available to do the work.

The largest expenditure $80,000 — will provide two kitchen shelters at Green Point. The park's popular interpretive theatre will be moved from a remote end of Long Beach to Green Point.

The present road access to Green Point campground will be relocated because of an existing traffic hazard.

Matrosovs said the Wickaninnish Beach day use area will be the site of a new beach access for foot traffic, and changing houses and a life saving station will be provided under a $192,000 budget.

Other expenditures include $100,000 for boat launching and beach facilities at Kennedy Lake, 10 miles east of the park, $95,000 for road paving and site improvement at the Radar Hill viewpoint, and $91,000 for a day use site at Grice Bay in the eastern area of the park at the site of an old sawmill.

British Columbia was mild and cloudy last night. Temperatures ranged from the high forties along the coast to the low thirties or high twenties in the interior. Rain was general along the coast and a few interior points. Some snow fell at the colder locations. A series of weather systems will move over the southern half of the province in the next few days with cloudy skies and periods of rain along the coast and some snow inland. The north will escape from the southern disturbances but shower activity will occur along the north coast and snowflurries are likely east of the coast mountains today and Friday.

Rosemary Eyes NDP Leadership

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia MLA Rosemary Brown (NDP—Vancouver-Burrard) said Wednesday she will ask her constituency association to decide whether she should run for the leadership of the federal New Democratic Party.

Brown said she expects to decide by mid-February whether to seek the post being vacated by David Lewis, who was defeated in the July 8 federal election.

Ed Broadbent, NDP parliamentary leader, has announced he will not seek the position. Selection will be made at the party's convention in Winnipeg next July.

Asked if she would abide by the decision of the association, Brown replied: "Pretty much."

Tanker Ban Lauded

By FRANK RUTTER
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — A plan by Washington state Governor Dan Evans to steer oil tankers away from hazardous inland waters was greeted with enthusiasm here Wednesday.

"Very good news," said one U.S. official who has been involved in tanker negotiations with Ottawa.

"That's really good," said a Canadian official also involved.

An aide to Senator Henry Jackson, the Washington state Democrat, said that Evans's plan was "in keeping" with Jackson's view.

Washington's other senator, Warren Magnuson, added that he is "pleased" that the governor has taken an active interest" that seemed to be in line with Magnuson's stand against increasing tanker traffic in Puget Sound.

Evans proposed state legislation Wednesday which would block construction of any new oil terminal facilities east of Port Angeles, would allow a new state agency to build an offshore terminal and a pipeline serving refineries, and establish a tax on crude oil delivered by tankers.

THE LANDLORD AND TENANT ACT:
SECURITY DEPOSITS

What IS a security deposit?

A security deposit is the money held by the landlord as security for the payment of rent in arrears, or for damages done to the residential premises.
The landlord may collect only one security deposit, of not more than half of one month's rent. And he may collect this deposit only when the tenant first rents the premises.
A landlord may not collect the last month's rent in advance, in addition to the security deposit.

What can't the money be used for?

A tenant who gives notice of termination must pay the last month's rent in full.
The tenant may not expect to pay only half of the last month's rent, and demand that the landlord apply the security deposit to the balance owing, unless both the tenant and landlord so agree in writing.

What happens to the deposit when the tenancy is terminated?

When a tenant leaves the premises undamaged and in a reasonable state of cleanliness, there's no problem—the landlord simply returns the full deposit and the accrued interest of 8% per year, within 15 days.

Where a dispute arises, every attempt should be made by both parties to resolve it in an amicable and reasonable manner.

Where an amicable agreement cannot be reached within 15 days, the landlord must turn the security deposit and the interest over to the rentalsman. A form for submission of the landlord's claim may be obtained from the Office of the Rentalsman and must be used in all cases. If the landlord's claim is less than or equal to the security deposit, the rentalsman will then mediate or adjudicate on the disposition of the money held by him in trust.

If the claim of the landlord is larger than the money held by the rentalsman, the landlord may elect to take court proceedings, but he must do so within a two-week period set by the rentalsman. If he fails to take court proceedings within that period the rentalsman will pay the money to the tenant upon an application

If you have questions regarding the Landlord and Tenant Act, please write to us.

People yell when bulldozers move in to alter their neighborhood.

But it's often too late, said new Fernwood area co-ordinator Brian Lewis in his office at George Jay Elementary School.

"We want to have a voice now," he said, leaning back in his chair. "And there's enough latent enthusiasm around" to organize that voice.

"I don't know what Fernwood needs," said Lewis.

"But there's enough people around who know they live in a place called Fernwood rather than Esquimalt or Vic West" that a community group could become a strong force.

Not only is Fernwood ripe for community organization, but it must be done if city council is to further consider the area for Neighborhood Improvement Project grants such as those in James Bay and Vic West.

"Fernwood is looking for NIP funding. But before it comes, governments must be assured of community participation," said Lewis. "Right now that participation is not forthcoming on its own.

"We want to instill enthusiasm and let people know they do have a say."

Though neighborhood feeling exists in the area, people still aren't speaking to issues, he said.

"There's a fear of people from the outside telling you what to do."

Brian and his Local Initiatives Project workers, which will number five when hiring is complete, want to give coherence and purpose to the neighborhood group. That takes work that unpaid organizers simply haven't the time to do.

The Fernwood Community Association has existed for several years, and two LIP employees are now working alongside Lewis unscrambling and filing association papers.

Set-up of regular meetings and publication of a newsletter are first priorities, said Lewis.

Association meetings will be one place citizens can voice their opinions, but a survey of some kind should also be done in the area, he said. "Maybe we'll have volunteers going door-to-door" as was done in Vic West.

First the group wants a permanent office. The corner room at George Jay is a temporary office lent by the school board for $1 a day.

"We're looking for a place people can drop in to," said Lewis.

The community news page appears every Thursday and is available to any community related, non-profit public groups.

Send or bring in your notices and reports of meetings to the Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas, or telephone 382-3131 and ask for "community news."

Dollar for dollar it's the best value in town.

That's the early assessment of JAMES BAY COMMUNITY SCHOOL which started its winter programming Monday with a total enrolment of 800 people, an increase of 200 over the fall session.

Janey Allan of the community school says the school offers 60 courses and especially exciting was that during registrations last week many people volunteered their services.

The school this term was forced to charge a fee for some of the courses to cover rental of the school at night.

"This number of registrations, despite the charge, proves the value of the community school idea" adds principal Dave Allen.

He says registrations will return $1,000 to the school board for rental but the school is still not out of the woods financially.

Money for staff this year comes from the school board but there are no assurances to date this policy will continue.

"Dollar for dollar it's the best thing in town. The community school idea is changing the attitudes of the adults and the children in the school.

"I can feel the change myself in dealing with the students. It's a good bargain and good things are happening down here," adds Allen.

As the kind of response the school is getting, Allen cited the pot luck supper sponsored by the school before Christmas.

"Instead of having a concert we had a pot luck supper and more than 800 showed up. It overloaded our facilities but it showed us there is a fantastic response to our programs."

The official opening of the community school has been set for Thursday, Feb. 6.

An organizational meeting of NON-STATUS INDIANS in the Victoria to Port Renfrew area will be held Sunday at 8 p.m. in St. Rose of Lima Church in Sooke.

Aims and objectives of the group, one of which is that "social justice shall be won with pride and dignity" will be explained.

The founding executive consists of Ed Mabley, president; Larry Mabley, vice-president; Denise Purcell, secretary-treasurer; and directors John Ryce, Daphne Ryce, Sandie Laurie, Jean Whitford and Karen Mabley.

A meeting is planned for March when a permanent executive will be elected.

President Mabley says the immediate problem facing the group was to get organized and then "we'll tackle the main functions."

He said there are about 40 families in the area who will be eligible to join. There are about 170 locals in B.C.

Membership is open to any person of one-quarter or more Indian blood and their families and who is not a registered member of an Indian band.

"It's time to get the real thing going" and that's what the JAMES BAY COMMUNITY ASSOCIATION will be doing in February . . . taking the first step in setting up a community resource board.

At the regular monthly meeting of the association this week it was decided to hold an informational meeting of James Bay residents Saturday, Feb. 8 at 2:30 p.m.

Vice-president Lou Madley says the meeting will explain what the resource board is about and to select a task force to plan board elections.

The vote is expected to be held May 24 along with three other locations in B.C. undertaking similar projects.

Madley says that tentatively 15 people will be elected to the first board. At present the community association is acting as the interim board.

"Never before have people at the community level been able to make decisions on services they themselves will receive," says Madley in supporting the board concept.

The board will concern itself with all human resources and public health matters in the community.

Metchosin wants its own planner.

This request is being forwarded to the Capital Region Board by the ALBERT HEAD Ratepayers, reports president Shirley Wilde.

She says the group is asking the board to set aside funds so that representative K. J. Rainey can hire a planner to develop a community plan for the Metchosin area.

"We want someone who will listen to our ideas and put them down on paper," adds Wilde.

This is the question asked the Capital Region Board by the SOOKE COMMUNITY ASSOCIATION after an executive meeting.

Norman Stephen of the Sooke group says they are concerned by the lack of progress and are asking the regional board why the delay in start of construction.

"The community association donated and cleared the land so there should be no holdup," said Stephen.

He added that other organizations "are uptight" and have also written the board registering their complaints and asking an explanation.

Sooke regional board representative Ron Dumont said "there appears to be an organized campaign to stir up trouble" concerning the arena.

He says the board expects "very soon" to get working drawings from the architects and when that happens the drawings will be checked by regional engineers before the calling of tenders.

He said there appears to be a misconception over the vote on the arena.

"This was not a vote to authorize funds for an arena. The community voted an expenditure of 1.75 mills for recreational purposes. After the vote a survey was taken and it was found the residents wanted an arena."

Dumont says the 1.75 mill levy will be enough to cover the cost of an $850,000 facility. When planned the cost was estimated at $650,000 and it is hoped the arena can be built within the higher mark despite the inflationary period.

Transition In Life

Two interesting events are scheduled by the Greater Victoria Citizens Counselling Centre for Jan. 30, and Feb. 1.

Dr. John K. Wood, associate of the Carl Rogers Centre for Studies of the Person, will be the speaker and co-ordinator at both.

On Jan. 30, Wood will speak in the Newcombe Auditorium at 8 p.m. on retirement, or as he calls it "toward an understanding of life transition."

Retirement, like other life changes is seen as life understanding of the process one goes through in a major life change helps take the sting out of the change, and also suggests ways that the transition may be facilitated.

On Feb. 1, Wood will conduct an all day workshop to train leaders for "looking at retirement" groups. This will be held in Metropolitan Church, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Bring your lunch. Coffee provided. There is no charge for these two events.

Syncrude in Advance

A strange inertia clouds the future of the Syncrude development in Alberta's tar sands. The multinational companies remaining in the ragged development consortium are threatening to abandon the project unless $1 billion can be found before the end of January. Ottawa is voicing suspicions that development costs have not escalated as much as the companies claim. At this point the federal government and the American oil companies are playing a delicate game to see who blinks first.

Last Sunday, Energy Minister Donald Macdonald underscored ambivalent federal attitudes saying a point existed at which Ottawa might say this is too much to put into a single project and perhaps funds should be diverted to finding frontier Arctic oil which, of course, would mean building the $5 billion Mackenzie Valley pipeline. In the short term, he added, considering costs and all, perhaps Canada could import more foreign oil.

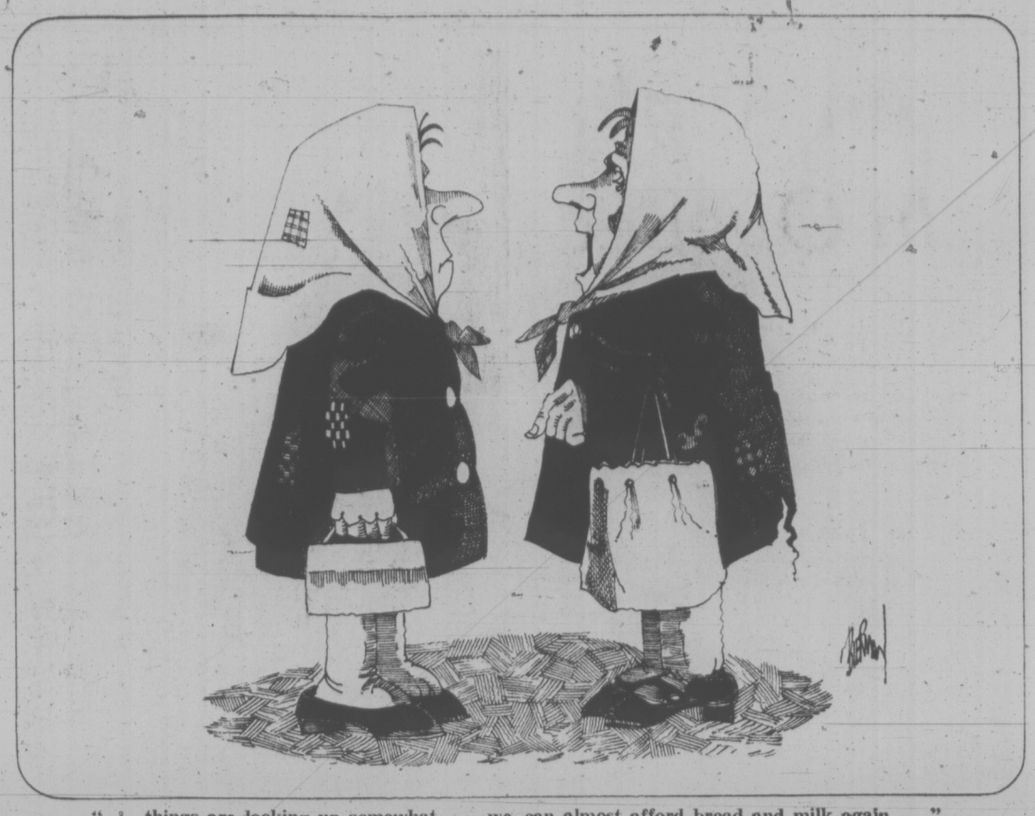
Fascinating trial balloons, especially from a government that thinks nothing of buying up the Canadian aerospace industry. Admittedly, the required $2 billion investment in the tar sands is 20 times more than the figure needed to take over Canadair and de Havilland of Canada, but the national benefit of a Canadian-owned tar sands could be 500 times more valuable to this country than a few thousand jobs in the aerospace industry.

Oil sands production at even current cost estimates of $7.80 per barrel would mean self-sufficiency in petroleum well into the next century with surplus enough to make us a major oil exporting nation. OPEC nations would be left holding their barrels. But the government continues to waddle around the sands like a wary beaver, afraid to take the plunge. If large petroleum companies such as Imperial Oil, Atlantic Richfield and Gulf thought the scheme worth a sizable investment, then surely the government of Canada could take the gamble, considering the high stakes involved.

Yet Macdonald's cautious reasoning remains as suspect as the oil companies' cost projections. To abandon the oil sands in favor of a costly investment in frontier exploration, plus another $5 billion for the Mackenzie pipeline makes no sense at all. Frontier oil exploration is to be encouraged but should government even partially fund such projects when there is no guarantee that large amounts of Arctic oil exist? Frontier oil means a $5 to $7 billion public and private investment figure; the oil sands represent $2 billion—a figure which the government thinks is too high while it entertains grandiose schemes for other supplies.

A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush, as the old saying goes.

Even stranger than idle thoughts about abandoning the sands was Macdonald's statement that perhaps we should import more oil in the short term. Petroleum-consuming countries are trying to cut imports to lessen demand for high-priced OPEC oil and break the cartel. If Canada were to import more, it would anger our economic allies and leave us open to the vagaries of supply, not to mention the adverse effect on our weakening balance of payments. The tar sands remain a gamble, but a small one compared to other long shots. If ever a project deserved public money this is it. Meanwhile Ottawa fiddles as imported oil rises in price every few months.



". . . things are looking up somewhat . . . we can almost afford bread and milk again . . ."

How Close the Holocaust?

It is interesting to see how U.S. Defence Secretary James Schlesinger has learned to stop worrying and live with the bomb. He told a congressional committee that a Soviet nuclear strike could wipe out U.S. strategic forces with a limited attack and hardly disrupt the economy while killing a paltry six million Americans.

After an initial loss of confidence in government — what government it might be asked? — survivors would adapt to the situation and support re-establishment of normal relationships.

A good theory with a minimum of mega-deaths, the gloom merchants might say. But the hypothesis assumes the Soviets would rely on a minimum of small clean nuclear bombs. Who is to say there is not another Dr. Strangelove wheeling around the Kremlin committed to massive retaliation with dirty bombs? Depending on the prevailing winds, bombs containing a large amount of radioactive fallout could kill 60 million Americans, not to mention a few million Canadians who reside close to the 49th parallel.

A recycled doomsday quality appears to be entering the official psyche in these trying times as it did at the height of the cold war. It would be foolish to bury our heads in the sand and forget that nuclear armageddon is a real possibility in a nervous world, but concentrating on alternatives to the holocaust seems preferable to counting the dead.

RICHARD GWYN

Work Ethic Alive in Canada

WINNIPEG — To most Canadians these days, and particularly to the young, work has become a four-letter word. Most of us, as we all know, are lazy, over-educated and overweight. Students of the rip-off rather than masters of a hard day's work. Right?

Wrong. The work ethic, that favorite topic, after taxes, of businessmen's lunches, is alive and well and living in Canada. Indeed it may be more potent than ever before. A growing number of women have become converted to John Calvin's philosophy.

"The centrality of work in our lives was repeatedly affirmed," concludes a Manpower department study just completed after two years of, well, work, and due to be published in March. "Canadians see themselves as an industrious people to whom work contributes a feeling of success and, for a large proportion, of personal fulfilment."

We're Beavers

The Manpower department undertook the survey out of a generalized concern that the work ethic might be dying and out of a particular worry about the contradiction between high unemployment (at present over 500,000 are jobless) and the persistence of a high rate of unfilled jobs (roughly 120,000 across the country.)

Canadians emerge from the survey as a bunch of beavers. The evidence — 97 per cent would prefer to work than collect unemployment insurance. The "family" ranks first among the ways Canadians "get the most important goals in life." Yet 57 per cent of employed men and 40 per cent of employed women put their work ahead of their family. If they can be believed, only seven per cent of Canadians arrive late at work while 53 per cent arrive early and the rest on time.

We are also a contented bunch of beavers. A remarkable 89 per cent say they are satisfied with their jobs, 61 per cent claim they would take the same job even if they had it to all over again.

The survey findings are certain to anger, or to embarrass, three groups — union leaders, women's liberationists and educators.

Union leaders talk mostly wages and salaries. They may be talking about the wrong issues. Poor promotion prospects, lack of challenge and lack of comfort and convenience all emerge in the survey as larger causes of employee dissatisfaction. While only 12 per cent were unhappy about their pay, 25 per cent complained about their chances for promotion.

Women's work may never be done, but it's largely by their own doing, or not doing. As many women as men — 58 per cent — said yes to the provocative statement, "A woman's place is in the home." Yet 57 per cent of women (against only 41 per cent of men) believe also that: "A woman should earn money to contribute to the household."

CASTOR CANADENSIS
. . . still our symbol

Younger and better-educated women are more liberated, yet three in five of all women do not consider their jobs a career. Equal pay for equal work may be hard to achieve. Seventy per cent of women, compared with 41 per cent of men said they would work for less than $3.50 an hour. Many cited "recreation" and "to keep busy" as reasons for working rather than the pay itself.

Young Canadians claim they enter the labor force ill-trained and ill-counselled. Lack of education and training were cited by 27 per cent as their greatest barrier to finding the right job. The survey found also, "a great deal of ignorance about the labor markets" among school students.

As with all attitude surveys, the Manpower study has its weaknesses. Notoriously, people tell pollsters what they think they should say rather than, necessarily, what they in fact think.

For example, Canadians seem to have less confidence in their neighbors' devotion to the work ethic than in their own. Eighty-two per cent agreed: "There is an atmosphere of welfare for anyone who wants it."

Even if wholly valid, the survey results may not convince. Everyone has private horror stories of trying to find a plumber or television repairmen, or of an acquaintance coasting by on unemployment insurance.

Taken a Beating

The day after reading the report I happened to interview Premier Ed Schreyer of Manitoba. I put the question to him. Schreyer, it turns out, is skeptical.

"I have a deep sense of frustration at what seems to me to be a decline in the work force" said Schreyer. "I think we are reaping the harvest of the false expectations and false priorities of the post-war years — the emphasis on the professions and the liberal arts and the disdain of trade and technical skills.

"This bothers me greatly. To be blunt, neither the federal nor the provincial governments yet know what to do about it. But the work ethic, as we knew it, has taken a beating."

Schreyer speaks from his practical experience as the head of a government. The Manpower study probed people's attitudes. The two views don't, in fact, contradict each other. Canadians, it is clear, want to work. Less clear is whether they want to work at the jobs that need to be done.

MAURICE WESTERN

No Key to Trudeau's Ciphers

OTTAWA — The Trudeau government has a message for us but is apparently encountering unexampled difficulties in putting it into words.

This is remarkable because the government attaches great significances to communication, a fact apparent not only from the spending figures but also by the emphasis so frequently placed on the importance of dialogue. Furthermore, the message which it is seeking to formulate has to do with matters of most serious concern.

Last Thursday, following a cabinet meeting, the prime minister offered some comments on the economic situation, both here and in the United States. He observed that Finance Minister John Turner's budgetary response was "about right," adding: "Indeed, the U.S. government, to take that example, which had a contrary stance a month before our budget, is now taking a stance which is very much the same as our budget, which means that we're trying to steer the economy through that narrow line between the danger of too high unemployment and too high inflation."

By Themselves?

As we are reminded on appropriate occasions, governments cannot accomplish these miracles by themselves. They require public co-operation and assistance. Thus we have been exhorted at various times and by various administrations to buy bonds, to tighten our belts, to increase production or to eat more eggs. What is the part of patriotism in the present circumstances?

The question was put very clearly by one reporter.

"What can the average Canadian do, or what would you like him to do, to help the economic situation? Show restraint? Spend money? What's your optimal Canadian in this situation, what's he doing?"

Trudeau's answer, as taken from the transcript, was as follows: "Well, in our type of market economy, where we don't have price and wage controls, the consumer spends money according to his preference. He has a preference scale and he spends his money on various products. The government can only respond and adjust to that. We're not directing him to spend in any particular area and I'm not answering your question by saying you should be spending more on durables and less on energy and so on. It's a market economy and the consumer spends where he can, where he wants to."

While this certainly describes the existing situation, any optimal-Canadian who can find guidance in it ought to be considered for an honors award.

It is possible that the prime minister's answer should be studied in the context of his earlier remarks about the United States. The current view in Washington is that the country should spend its way to prosperity. A similar, although less complicated, policy was advocated in an earlier slump. It inspired a popular song which began with the line: "Mr. Herbert Hoover says that now's the time to buy." According to the modern Republican version, which recognizes the enhanced status of General Motors, American consumers should spend an additional $12 billion, buying more automobiles but driving them less.

As Trudeau observes, we are still better off than the United States. Is the message then that we ought to spend patriotically but with less abandoned than our American neighbors? The prime minister's answer appears open to that interpretation, providing we spend according to a preference scale, which we will doubtless do in the absence of further guidance. Good citizenship does not, apparently, require us to rush off to General Motors. Nor does it require us to spend less on energy—regardless of the plans being hatched by the office of energy conservation or the advertising campaign which is supposed to be in prospect.

While the earnest citizen may find this a bit unhelpful, he cannot well complain that his government is imposing any burdens on his conscience. But is this a correct interpretation of the prime minister's remarks?

The text shows that is not the complete message. There was a subsequent question. "How about in terms of jobs, in terms . . . are you asking for any kind of restraint in terms of salary, wages?"

To this, rather different query, Trudeau replied: "Well, the general approach that we've been using in fighting inflation is that there should be exercise of restraint in government spending at all levels, and in consumer spending, that there should be less waste in the use of energy, food; that there should be a tighter management of not only the national budget but each individual's budget."

The prime minister, as innumerable observers have pointed out, is the government's finest communicator. Clearly, therefore, the problems of communication in this particular area must be of exceptional difficulty. For the optimal Canadian must apparently reconcile the irreconcilable if he is to extract from these successive responses the message that his government is endeavoring to convey.

Each of us must tightly manage his individual budget while spending according to his preference scale. We should observe restraint while spending where we can and where we want to. There should be less waste in the use of energy but the prime minister, because the government can only respond and adjust, will not say that we should spend less on energy. For the citizen to respond and adjust he must read the message but Trudeau, for reasons undisclosed, will not entrust him with the key to the cipher.

Play Bridge

Less than optimal Canadians may be tempted to draw conclusions which would have little appeal in Ottawa. Some may be persuaded that government policy amounts to recitation and little more. In which case, it presumably matters very little how we respond to it. To others, it may appear that the government's conception of restraint is represented by its own spending record; in which case, we presumably have quite enough guidance in our own individual preference scales.

There are also the selected Canadians with whom the ministers have been exploring approaches to dialogue behind closed doors. According to the prime minister, the exploration has become more intensive. Presumably the government is less cryptic at these social gatherings than it is in public. Otherwise conversation must be rather difficult. Or are the distinguished participants called together to consider government-propounded riddles; and adjourning at first opportunity for a few hands of bridge?

CUPE Replies

We take extreme exception to being singled out as the "big bad people" of Esquimalt. From Mayor Art Young's address the taxpayer of Esquimalt is told that in all possibility there will be a nine mill increase on his 1975 taxes for which members of CUPE will be responsible. Does this include the non-union salary increases? We are also being blamed for the library, capital region board and school board increases.

We would now like to ask what part of the nine mill increase the new recreation complex will cost. Strangely enough the taxpayer voted this project down, and correct us if we're wrong, on two separate occasions. After the new complex was begun it was found that the parking situation was inadequate and it was necessary to purchase, at the present inflationary prices, private properties.

It is also noted that reference was made to the number of applications for jobs within the municipality in 1974. This little tidbit to us is a threat to the worker that they can be dispensed with if the boat is rocked too violently. Staff cuts were also big print in the local newspaper. Does this include the high-paid non-union personnel as well?

Why did CUPE Local 333 turn down management's "package deal" which includes the 15.76 per cent wage increase? Well, we asked for a cost-of-living increase to help offset the rising costs of meat, eggs, milk, housing, etc. and job reclassifications — just two of our requests that management would not discuss.

To date, there has not been any honest, down-to-earth bargaining between management and local 333 representatives. This, to us, is not collective bargaining. We are told to take the package deal or else.

Here is some food for thought — why have the management committees throughout the greater Victoria areas found it necessary to engage the services of a prominent lawyer to negotiate this "package deal" when there are several high-priced talented personnel already employed by the local councils and various boards in this area?

And Mr. and Mrs. Taxpayer, who is paying the prominent lawyer's salary?

In closing, we like to say that we agree with Mayor Art Young's final paragraph of his address: "Gentlemen, 1975 promises to be a very difficult year with inflation and recession a continuing problem. We will meet it better and serve our community best if we debate the issue — not the personalities involved." — Negotiating Committee, Local 333, CUPE, Esquimalt.

Sensitive Plant

In spite of one of Galsworthy's characters remarking that "the press is a sensitive plant," I'm in the mood to write the Times concerning Friday evening's (Jan. 17) issue, which I am at present trying (?) to read.

First of all I refer you to page five. Then I ask you to look at the article from the Vancouver Sun. Parts of this are so mixed up in the printing that it makes no sense. On the right-hand side of the page the margin has been so closely cut that it overruns the printing, making the trade union article difficult to read, to say nothing of what the cutting has done to the financial page on the other side of the sheet.

Within the last year or so, we have had a very inconvenient strike by the printers, which was finally settled after a good many months, with what most of us would consider very good pay increases and bonuses to the workers. As a result of this and other expenses the price of the paper is now $4 a month instead of $3. I consider a good daily paper almost a necessity. Surely the public is entitled to something better than I have described above. — Mrs. Eleanor M. Howard, 150 Beach Drive.

VANCOUVER — The unfortunate plight of about 20 or 30 Vancouver people who find that their homes had been mortgaged twice over by the now-defunct Dominion Trust Co., which failed last fall, is to be brought to the attention of Chief Justice Hunter next week by the liquidator. Many a man who has received $2,000 or $3,000 through the company now finds that two different people hold a mortgage for the full amount on his property.

An Anglo In Quebec

By DON BELL

(Bell won the Leacock humor award in 1972 for a collection of stories about downtown Montreal called Saturday Night at the Bagel Factory. He wrote this article for the Paris newspaper Le Monde.)

What's it like to be an angolophone in Quebec? The answer is partly in the question.

That such a question is asked so often, that as an anglophone when I move among French Canadians I'm usually made to feel defensive about my anglophonism, that so many of my acquaintances balk or seem startled when I say, "Je suis Quebecois," and insist nonetheless on pigeonholing me as "un anglais," gives you some idea of what it's like to be an anglophone in Quebec.

It should be made clear at the outset that I speak for myself only, as cosmic creature of no race or background, but whose first language is English, therefore, by definition, an anglophone; who is living with a French-Canadian woman; who speaks French well enough to move fairly easily through the two societies; who leans toward nationalism politically (because I suspect independence may be the only solution to Quebec's complexes), but who, paradoxically, is anti-nationalist in any form philosophically (because I have a conviction that those who are obsessed by political causes, generally speaking, have a narrow, shallow view of life; humanity must transcend politics!)

In other words, perhaps I am not the ideal anglophone to answer the question of "What's it like to be an anglophone in Quebec?" But is there any ideal, representative anglophone? Besides a diversity of opinons in the so-called anglophone community, there is also a diversity of cultures.

In Montreal, where the majority of Quebec's anglophones live, there are Greek anglophones (whose parents perhaps speak Greek but who were brought up in the streets and in school speaking English), Italian, Irish, Jewish, Syrian, Chinese and, of course, English anglophones — les anglophones anglais — those stereotypes living traditionally in Westmount or Town of Mount Royal (two of the most affluent districts of Montreal). White Anglo-Saxon Protestants (WASPs), portrayed so often in Quebec films, plays, books and teleromans as dull, boring, humorless, unsympathetic, unkind, mercantile, greedy, speaking the most hideous fractured French. This is the cliche anglophone, part beast, part-robot — and mostly myth.

The issue in Quebec is not so much of anglophonia, but of anglophobia. There is a compulsive disinterest in les anglais evolving from a long-time inner resentment of them. This indifferece is so obsessive, in fact, that it has become a kind of paranoia.

I can understand the historic principal behind it — the oppressed figure rising up against his oppressor and switching the situation. Eat humble pie, my friend, for the centuries of suffering you have inflicted upon me. As I remove the yoke, you shall drown in my bitter tears . . . I understand this, even in the 20th century, yet deplore it.

At times I suspect that I am living in a racist society. Can this be so?

I keep hearing references to "les anglais" on television and radio, in films, in newspapers, often in tones of bitterness. I find myself always being asked: "Etes-vous anglais?" or "Etes-vous anglophone?" It has reached the point where I'm usually forced to reply facetiously, playing on my name, that "Non, je ne suis pas un anglophone, mais un telephone," or "Je suis un anglophone d'anglophone francophone telephone."

Now to be fair and not one-sided, I half suspect that many anglophones (Ugh, did I use that word?) are equally racist toward French Canadians. They are to be deplored as well and thank God most of those bigots fled to Ontario, the western provinces, or the United States when Quebec launched its revolution some 10 years ago.

So I speak as a cosmic franglophone (a franglophone is an anglophone who can speak French and is able to move fluidly between both groups). Many of those who stayed in Quebec belong to this group. We are, in a sense, a third world living in Quebec. Unfortunately, there is little or no recognition, especially among ardent nationalists, of this third world group.

As an anglophone, one is always type-cast as being a cross between a mythic English bourgeois lady in a mink coat who says, "Oh dear, oh dear" as she sips tea in her Westmount salon, and a ratfink businessman working in a computer company, sadistically crushing under foot any individual who has the audacity to speak French.

DON BELL . . . a racist society?

There seems to be little realization among Quebec francophones that many of us who stayed here and didn't flee to Ontario care for Quebec as much as they do and will even defend its right to secede from the yoke of federalism.

There is a tendency among anglophones, true, to pander to "our French-speaking cousins" and smother them with deadly, unwanted love, but on the other hand many of us are quite lucidly undecided about which path Quebec should take, and some even believe separatism is the only answer.

Consider the recent Montreal municipal elections. Thousands of us anglphones in English districts such as Notre Dame de Grace, Cote des Neiges, Snowdon, voted for the Rassemblement des Citoyens de Montreal (MCM) headed by a former Jesuit priest and avowed separatist, Jacques Couture. When the results came in, French language radio and television interviewers were stunned, all asking elected candidates the same question: "How do you explain the anglophone vote?"

General reaction: Among both anglophones and francophones, those who are the least nationalistic and who have the most tolerance, sympathy and understanding of the other group are those who have the best grasp of the other language.

Bill 22 (the critical language act in Quebec) upsets some anglophones, who are worried that basic freedoms, especially those in education, will be withdrawn. If the situation ever reaches the stage where freedoms are removed and we begin to live in a police state, it will affect everyone, not just anglophones.

It bothers me a bit, of course, that I may not be able to communicate with my Quebec government in English (although cheques written in English to pay for driving licences or tax bills no doubt will be accepted). But then I say, that's tough luck for my compatriots who can't read or write at all in French. It's time for them to learn if they plan to continue living in Quebec.

Anyway, it's understandable because French Canadians, too, were for so many years the butt of thoughtlessness and lack of consideration by English Canadians, especially in large "anglophone" companies where English was the working language always and a French Canadian who wished to advance was forced to "speak white only."

▣

But whatever the past, to answer the question, "What's it like?" — I feel racially strangled at times.

Doors seem to close because I have a slight accent, I mix up my genders, I can never remember if it's le maison or la maison and that gives me away.

I feel annoyed because although there are numerous French Canadians employed on English language radio and television as animateurs or actors, it is a one-way street. There are no Anglos ever hired as animateurs and seldom are any invited as guests on French-language radio or televison.

Although Montreal's main Anglo newspapers, the Star and the Gazette, have many reporters with French names who cover everything from police news to politics, I know of not a single Anglophone or any of the more than half-dozen Montreal French-language newspapers.

There is a total, blissful ignorance in francophone Quebec society, I'm afraid, of the contemporary currents, for instance, the vibrant cosmopolitan life in downtown Montreal, which is being captured in literature by many current anglo or third-world anglo writers.

I hope that many Quebecois overcome their obsessive and restrictive political-ness. It is holding them down.

Call Off the Crusaders

By J. W. FULBRIGHT

(Fulbright ended a long term this month as Democratic senator for Arkansas. These remarks were made in a recent speech to the National Press Club in Washington.)

The heart of the matter is a surge of moral extremism in our attitude toward politics and polical leaders. The genesis, I have no doubts, was Vietnam, followed by Watergate, both of which inevitably undercut confidence in our national leadership.

Moral indignation, however, even justified moral indignation, has a tendency to become vindictive and self-righteous. Mistakes of judgment come to be perceived as premeditated malevolence, and an interest in correcting mistakes gives way to an obsession with punishing the malefactors, with giving them their just desserts.

My own view is that no one should get everything he deserves — the world would become a charnel house.

Looking back on the Vietnam war, it never cocurred to me that President Johnson was guilty of anything worse than bad judgment. He deceived the Congress, and he deceived me personally, over the Gulf of Tonkin episode in 1964 and his purposes in the election of '64. I resented that, and I am glad the deceit was exposed, but I never wished to carry the matter beyond exposure. I never hati the slightest sympathy with those who called President Johnson and his advisers "war criminals".

We should stop conducting our affairs like a morality play.

Lying and dirty tricks are intolerable not because of what they do to the trickster's soul but because they disrupt our society and its institutions. Because they do, it is essential that they be deterred, but this can usually be accomplished by exposure, embarrassment and censure; it does not require hunting down the malefactors to their utter ruin.

An intolerance of lying can and should be reconciled with a degree of tolerance for liars considering that few of us get through an ordinary day without trimming the truth once or twice.

In a democracy we ought to try to think of our public servants not as objects of adulation or of revilement, but as servants in the literal sense, to be lauded or censured, retained or dispensed with, according to the competence with which they do the job they were hired to do.

Bitter disillusionment with our leaders is the other side of the coin of worshipping them. If we did not expect our leaders to be demi-gods, we would not be nearly as shocked by their failures and transgressions.

The media have a special responsibility for the restoration of civility in these matters, not only because they have contributed to the incivility, but also because there is no one to correct journalistic excesses except the members of the profession themselves.

The media have become a fourth branch of government in every respect except for their immunity from checks and balances. This is as it should be — I can conceive of no restraints on the press which would not be worse than the excesses to which I have referred. But because you cannot and should not be restrained from outside, you have a special responsibility to restrain yourselves.

FULBRIGHT
. . . responsibility needed

After a long era of divisiveness and acrimony, we are in need of a reaffirmation of the social contract among people, government and the media. The essence of that contract is a measure of voluntary restraint, an implicit agreement among the major groups and interests in our society that none will apply their powers to the fullest. For all the ingeniousness of our system of checks and balances, our ultimate protection against tyranny is the fact that we are a people who have not wished to tyrannize one another.

"The republican form of government," wrote Herbert Spencer in 1891, "is the highest form of government but because of this it requires the highest type of human nature — a type nowhere at present existing."

We have shown in times of adversity in the past that we are capable of this "highest type of human nature." Let us call it into existence once again — we have never needed it more.

BOWING TO AUTOS' ALTAR

By ROBERT J. SAMUELSON

WASHINGTON — The last month has been eloquent testimony to the reluctance of Americans to come to terms with the enormous energy appetite of the automobile.

Contrary to the widespread public impression, President Ford's major energy proposal — his complicated tax and tariff on crude oil, which will raise gasoline prices an estimated 10 cents a gallon — is soft on both the automobile industry and the average American driver. Other fuel prices will rise much more in percentage terms.

Rejecting a stiff (probably 30 to 40-cent) increase in the gasoline tax may have been the president's most fateful energy decision. It relieved pressure on the automobile industry to break radically with its past: To produce a basic, simple, fuel-efficient car. Shorn of many of today's common accessories, such a car would give good fuel mileage, but less power and comfort than current automobiles. It would be intended primarily for transportation, not ego gratification, sex appeal or even driving pleasure.

Like it or not, such a car is probably inevitable and it is a good bet that a big increase in the gas tax — coupled with stiff increases mandated for later years — would have forced the public and the automobile industry to accept the inevitable. Postponing it only risks crippling the nation's energy policy. Any program that fails to quench the fuel thirst of American cars — automobiles consume more than one-third of U.S. oil — invites ultimate failure.

That this simple logic has no political appeal is obvious but, unfortunately, there is a more fundamental problem handcuffing the White House and congress. Because the automobile industry's collapse lies at the heart of the current recession, the more the government makes fuel efficiency an obsession, the more it risks driving the consumer away from today's big cars — in short, prolonging the industry's stagnation and high unemployment.

A genuine dilemma exists here. The president's response (and Congress too) is to try to solve both the energy and economic problems simultaneously, but the sad irony is that attempting this feat may end up making both problems worse, not better.

It is easy to see what has been sacrificed on energy. Tugged between its desire to stimulate economic recovery and its long-term objective of reducing fuel consumption, the administration attempted to reconcile the twin goals by negotiating directly with the auto manufacturers. The White House's target of improving gasoline consumption of new cars 40 per cent by 1980 sounds impressive, but there is less to it than meets the eye.

Tension and the News

By BORDEN SPEARS
Toronto Star

Prime Minister St. Laurent was a corporation lawyer who became such a folksy, engaging political campaigner that he was known to a generation of Canadian voters as "Uncle Louis." He was also an authoritative head of government who could lose his temper when crossed. He did it once in an Ottawa press conference.

A reporter asked a question about an obscure civil servant who had suddenly become a cause celebre because he was fired from his job for what looked like political reasons. St. Laurent, somewhat impatiently, repeated what the government had already told opposition questioners in Parliament — that there were reasons it could not disclose for withholding the facts of the case.

★ ★ ★

"However," he added, "I am prepared to indicate off the record what those reasons are."

"No, sir," said the reporter, courteously enough. "Off-the-record information is of no use to me."

The Prime Minister flushed angrily, bit back a retort, and abruptly terminated the press conference.

Both men were right. The government undoubtedly had its reasons for secrecy. And the reporter represented the best tradition of the press by insisting that when a man had been placed under suspicion, he should be convicted on the facts or cleared.

Despite his momentary irritation, St. Laurent as a politician understood that the impasse was an inescapable aspect of the tension that exists between the press and the news sources with whom it deals. The tension is summed up in the definition of news, by one authority, as "whatever somebody doesn't want printed."

The legitimate aim of most news sources is to promote the spread of information that will help their cause or their interest, and to withhold what may embarrass it. The business of the press is the disclosure of both kinds equally.

Because of their heavy traffic with the press, politicians generally understand this semi-adversary relationship and are familiar with the rules under which the game is played. For this reason, politicians seldom complain about their treatment in the newspapers. Even more rarely do they complain of misrepresentation or misquotation, even though what comes out in print may not conform with their idea of the way it should have been reported.

The complaints come in the main from persons who are seldom in the news, whose contacts with the press are infrequent, and who fail to realize that a conversation with a reporter in working hours is not a social chat but an interview for the record. When such a person sees an ill-considered comment baldly reported in a news article, his reaction is one of startled indignation.

The train of thought goes, "I should not have said that; I would not have said that; therefore I did not say that." A more accurate rendition is, "I didn't know it would look like that; what will happen if the boss sees it?"

What often happens is that the boss (or a wife, or an angry associate) sees it first, and the rockets begin to fly. The culprit is called to account, indignantly repudiates the quotation, and the press once again is accused of irresponsible misreporting.

The difficulty is one which newspapers encounter almost daily. But the fact is that reporters do not invent the words they put in the mouths of the persons they interview: to do so would be to write an early end to a career in journalism. On every recent occasion when a directly attributed statement has been called into question, it has been substantiated by notes made at the time or by a tape recording.

This is not to ascribe infallibility to reporters. They can be wrong, too, and are capable of such errors as a failure to grasp the technicalities of a complex issue. But instances of direct misquotation are so rare as to be negligible.

A related source of irritation is the habit in some news sources of giving information freely, and then asking that it not be attributed. It is then too late. A reporter will respect a request for confidentiality, but only on a clear prior agreement that that is the basis of the interview. The universal rule of journalism is that when a reporter asks questions, he is seeking information he can publish. He asks questions for no other purpose. His job then is to publish the answers, not to protect a news source from the consequences of his own indiscretion.

RRSPs Are Great —But Beware Traps

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Registered retirement plans are a popular way to reduce taxes but they contain some horrendous traps for the unwary.

The plans are a good preparation for retirement and they can save as much as $832 for those who belong to a company pension plan and $1,660 for those who don't.

But the registered plans are not a good investment if there is no tax benefit.

For example, why invest $2,000 at 9.5 per cent (minus about .75 per cent for administration) for a net interest return of 8.75 per cent, when a term deposit might bring in 10 per cent. And a term deposit can be withdrawn at the expiry time without penalty. When the RRP is withdrawn, tax must be paid on it.

An inferior investment.

But the tax saving makes it worthwhile.

Therefore investors are being cautioned by some counsellors to deposit no more than the maximum amount for tax benefits (unless a large retirement fund is an urgent goal).

However, some investors have found themselves in a pretty pickle as a result of an over-eager salesman or unfamiliarity with the regulations.

One investor rushed into a $12,000 purchase of a registered retirement plan, only to discover he was eligible only to claim about $2,000 against taxes.

In a fit of anger, he withdrew the extra $10,000, which had to be added to taxable income. His taxable income really was something like $14,000 but the in-and-out motion boosted his taxable income to $24,000. He really owed only $4,261 in taxes but his hasty actions forced him by law to pay $8,642 in taxes on a taxable income that really was only $14,000.

There are two morals. The first is do not overbuy and the second is, if you do, leave the excess in the fund as there is a provision under the act for claiming the overpayment against future years. If the $10,000 must be withdrawn in a lump sum, it should be done in a year when there is no other income, reducing the tax burden to something like $1,500 on the $10,000.

Another investor found himself over-investing in registered retirement plans by a circuitous route. He was entitled to a maximum $4,000 RRP against taxes so he shopped around for the best deal. He found something to his liking so he signed up for $4,000. Later he heard from a company with a better plan so he signed for $4,000 more.

Unfortunately, he discovered too late he could not claim them both against current taxes. One was a good tax saving, the other was an inferior investment instrument.

The federal government has added a new loophole to the RRPs this year, but it also contains pitfalls.

An investor entitled to a $2,500 RRP can buy a $1,000 plan for himself and $1,500 in his wife's name and charge them both against his own taxes.

Some investors see in this a chance to put $1,500 in a plan for the wife, claim the tax rebate, then have the wife withdraw the $1,500 completely tax-free. If the $1,500 were in the husband's name and he were in the 40 per cent tax bracket it would cost him $600 in taxes to take out the $1,500.

However, this neat little tax dodge contains a joker. The husband could no longer claim the married exemption because his wife would have earned $1,500, the amount of the RRP. As the current married exemption is $1,492, the investor would have to pay almost $600 because of the lost exemption.

Net gain: virtually nil.

Other pitfalls have to do with the type of plan the investor selects.

A plan based upon stocks can show exceptional profits or startling losses, because markets go up and down in rather spectacular fashion.

With retirement in mind, most investors opt for a guaranteed income plan, which acts like a bank deposit. Some plans declare an interest rate that does not change for five years. Others change interest rates annually or even every six months. There are advantages both ways, depending upon the direction of interest rates, but frequent changes in the rate appears to be a more favorable approach because the long-term direction of interest rates is upwards.

Some plans have front-end loading and withdrawal charges. These can reduce a favorable-sounding 10 per cent interest ot the equivalent of 8.5 per cent or less.

It is easier to calculate what the investor gets as a net return when there are no hidden charges of this type. Some plans operate with an administration fee which reduces the interest rate by a visible amount.

For example, a 10 per cent interest plan that carries a one per cent administration fee really is paying at 9 per cent.

There are other pitfalls but they come at the end of the plan, when funds are withdrawn for retirement. The theory is a man's income is lower when he retires and therefore he will pay back in taxes less than the amount he is saving in taxes now.

However, it's not necessarily so.

Some recently-retired executives are discovering their combined pensions this year are higher than their working income in 1955. It is conceivable a person will pay more than $832 in taxes he is saving now when the cash is withdrawn 20 years hence. But at least the taxed are deferred.

Some accountant has calculated that $20,000 invested in RRPs at the rate of $1,000 a year for 20 years will be worth a total of $57,000 at the end of the 20 years, based upon a 10 per cent interest rate.

While $57,000 seems like a lot of money, there is no guarantee it will have the same buying power of $20,000 of today's dollar.

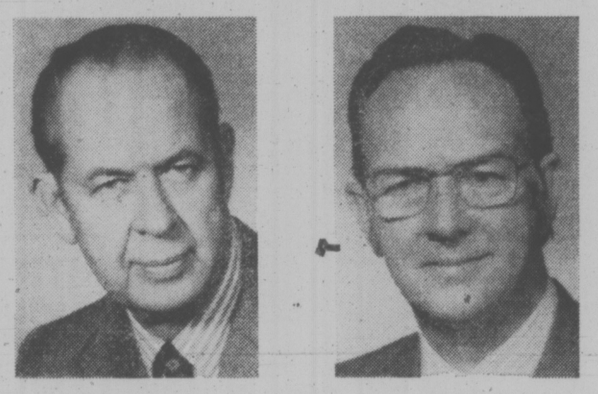
WOODWARD STORES LIMITED ANNOUNCEMENT


T. R. FARRELL — C. R. CLARRIDGE
C. N. Woodward, Chairman of the Board of Directors, announces the retirement of T. R. Farrell and the appointment of C. R. Clarridge.
T. R. Farrell, retiring President of Woodward's, has contributed greatly to the stature and expansion of the firm.
Mr. Farrell started with Woodward's in 1928 in the Meat Department and then moved to the Provisions in 1935. In 1953 he was appointed Manager and Director of the Vancouver Food Operation, making him, at the age of 39, one of Woodward's youngest Directors. In 1955 he was appointed to Vice-President in charge of Woodward's Food Operations, Vice-President and Assistant General Manager in 1957, Executive Vice-President in 1964 and President in 1972.
C. R. Clarridge succeeds Mr. Farrell as President. Crafts for the youngsters —the 3 to 5-year-old groups—is proving to be a popular item in the NEWTON - RICHMOND Community Association activities during the day at Newton Gardens activity room.

. . . More Community News

Two questions are still open concerning Vic West's desire to have a community centre built under the Neighborhood Improvement Program.

President Allan Rogers of the VIC WEST Community Association says the NIP committee will be getting together to discuss the operational cost and budget for construction of the centre.

The community centre was the first choice of residents when a survey was taken in conjunction with the program.

About $900,000 has been allocated by Victoria city council to Vic West under the federal programs for neighborhood improvement.

Rogers is also asking for funding to send some members of the committee and city hall staffers to Port Alberni and North Vancouver to look at similar community centres in those areas.

The association was told at its executive meeting last week that 16 students are now in the alternate program. Counsellors and staff members of the centre help children who have trouble coping with the regular school program. Last year there were six enrolled in this program.

"Shocked rigid" is the reaction by View Royal to last week's statement by B.C. Liberal Senator Ray Perrault supporting for the moving of oil tanks from Victoria Harbor to Esquimalt Harbor.

"He claims British Columbia is out of touch with the rest of Canada but this man is out of touch with B.C."

View Royal has gone on record as opposing the moving of the tanks into Esquimalt Harbor because the area already has a major federal park (Fort Rodd Hill) and a capital region park. It is also a bird sanctuary, sailing area and fishing spot.

"I have written a letter telling him what we think of this great idea of his. There are dangerous rocks in the harbor and an oil spill there could do great harm not only to the parks but to the bird sanctuary."

Last week Perrault toured the area by helicopter and after viewing the area said he would approach Defence Minister James Richardson to have the tanks moved to defence property in Esquimalt Harbor.

Perrault at that time said the site near Fort Rodd Hill appeared to be "most excellent" for that purpose because of the heavily forested topography which allows a high degree of concealment.

This is direct opposite to the views of View Royal residents who have been campaigning for years for the region to buy undeveloped land near the waterfront for park development to conform to the proposed community plan.

The View Royal planning committee is holding a meeting tonight at 8 in the community hall on Island Highway to discuss the community plan which is in its final stages.

Regional board planners will be in attendance to explain the plan.

Problems involving the construction of the postal sorting station on Glanford were discussed at a meeting last week between postal officials and members of the ROYAL OAK and NORTHRIDGE community associations.

Mrs. Ruth Clay, secretary of the Royal Oak group, says most of the concerns of the residents were aired and hopefully the postal people and Saanich council will take these concerns under consideration.

"Saanich will enter into a land use contract and hopefully will write into the contract our concerns.

"Anyway you look at it there are going to be problems and they won't get any smaller," adds Clay.

She said residents in the immediate vicinity of the station, located on Glanford back of the Simpson Sears warehouse, are mainly concerned with noise levels, access, landscaping and the amount of traffic generated by the facility.

The meeting was held in the post office board room and 17 from the two organizations were in attendance.

Clay said plans call for a 50 foot buffer zone on the side of the plant with a 100-foot landscaped zone fronting on Glanford.

She said postal authorities gave a verbal promise that most of the trucks bring in and taking out mail will use Vanalman and the highway and not travelling the "more dangerous" Glanford route.

The entrance to the plant will be "near a corner which is extremely dangerous" but nothing was said about fixing this area on Glanford, adds Clay.

Several items will be on the agenda when the FLORENCE LAKE INVOLVEMENT ASSOCIATION holds its first meeting of the year in the Langford Firehall, Monday, Jan. 27, at 7 p.m.

President Axel Brock-Miller says the association is concerned with highways department widening of Florence Lake Road.

"It appears they are doing it just to accommodate the trailer park and this will cause an even worse speeding problems than we have now."

There is a 20-mile limit but the group feels that with the completion of work cars "will be roaring" along the road.

There is also concern, he said, about the trailer park itself and the apparent expansion of the facility. "It looks like they are constructing another 80 to 100 pads.

"There is a serious problem with pollution both from faulty septic tanks and a 150-gallon oil spill.

"There is a tremendous amount of silt discoloring Florence Lake and this is of great concern to us."

Brock-Miller said the septic tank and oil spill happened within a two-week period and the association is looking for assurances this will not happen again.

Good Evening Mrs. Johnson . . . M.G

Consider the Toronto Dominion Retirement Savings Deposit.

The TD RSD is a bank deposit. That's the big difference. Its high-yielding interest rate is adjusted twice yearly to match that of the TD five-year Certificate of Deposit. And you never have to worry about fluctuations in the market value of stocks and bonds as you would with some other R.R.S.P.'s. Finally, there's no interest penalty for deregistering your TD RSD at any time.

As with all R.R.S.P.'s, eligible annual contributions are deductible from your current taxable income – up to $4,000 in some cases. So depending on your circumstances, the 1974 income tax you defer can be substantial.

The money you put into a TD RSD works hard to earn more money for you. For example, if you start your TD RSD at age 35 and contribute $1,500 at the beginning of each year, you'll have put in $45,000 by the time you're 65. Assuming a conservative rate of return over the 30 years of 7½% per annum, compounded semi-annually, your savings will have grown to $171,277!

Your TD Manager is the person to ask about a TD Retirement Savings Deposit. You'll get all the facts, and you'll be pleased to know that you can start for as little as $250 with contributions of $100 or more whenever you wish. But hurry, March 1st, 1975 is the deadline for the 1974 tax year.

TDRSD ITS TIME IS NOW.

Minority Role Eyed In Syncrude Scheme

OTTAWA — CP — The government is considering only a minosity investment position in toe-inflation-threatened Syncrude project to tap the Alberta oil sands, Energy Minister Donald Macdonald told the Commons Wednesday.

He also declined to give a commitment that a Commons committee can study any federal participation, which must be decided by a Jan. 31 deadline, before the government makes up its mind.

T. C. Douglas (NDP — Nanaimo - Cowichan - The Islands), the NDP energy critic, had asked whether the only possible government participation would be enough to ensure a controlling interest.

The NDP favors government control of Syncrude.

An Imperial Oil Ltd. spokesman told reporters Wednesday that with nine days left to the Syncrude deadline Jan. 31, there appear to be no applicants from the private sector to step in and help provide the $1 billion the consortium says is needed to keep Syncrude alive.

Without Syncrude, some fear Canadian self-sufficiency in petroleum will evaporate even faster than forecast now.

There had been no response from either the Alberta or federal governments about participation.

Jack Armstrong, Imperial's chairman and chief executive, said it will be as simple to cancel the project as to close it down for three to six months to attempt to scrape up the needed development capital.

Don McIvor, senior vice-president, said it might take four years to "crank up" Syncrude again if it is postponed or halted.

MACKENZIE DELTA RESERVE LAUDED

OTTAWA (CP) — New oil and gas discoveries in the Mackenzie Delta-Beaufort Sea area will contribute to oil reserves necessary for a possible oil pipeline in the Canadian north, Northern Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan said Wednesday.

He was commenting on Tuesday's announcement by Shell Canada Ltd. of additional finds of gas and oil about 80 miles north-northeast of Inuvik, N.W.T.

The new find is about one mile from a previous discovery made by Shell in January, 1973.

Buchanan said in a press release that the new find demonstrates proof of extensive gas reserves in the Shell pool and establishes significantly large new reserves of oil.

Military Rites Defended

OTTAWA CP) — Defence Minister James Richaroson Wednesday defended as fully proper the procedures used to receive coffins of three servicemen killed with the Middle East United Nations Emergency force.

The coffins were accompanied by escort officers, the bodies had been dealt with acorhing to the wishes of next-of-kin and there were three military funerasl, he said.

He was replying in the commons to Sean O'Sullivan (PC — Hamilton-Wentworth) who said the coffins had arrived at Montreal in wooden crates uncovered by flags.

There had been no officer to meet them and dead soldiers were entitled to more dignity than had been displayed.

O'Sullivan's facts are wrong, Richardson retorted.

Later, under questioning outside the commons about the possible origin of O'Sullivan's statements, the defence minister termed unfair a picture of a returning coffin distributed by the Canadian Press, Jan. 3.

Marchand First Tory Target As Commons Session Resumes

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The official opposition zeroed in on Transport Minister Jean Marchand in the first post-Christmas question period Wednesday and extracted fro mhim once again the acknowledgment that transport in Canada is in a "mess."

Under heavy questioning from the Progressive Conservatives led by Robert Stanfield, the transport minister conceded there was "no overall policy" in his department to cope wtih transport problems.

He was working on the preparation on formulation of a new policy, he said.

Calls for his resignation came from opposition benches.

Last November prior to the minister leaving for a holiday the opposition members had agreed among themselves to "lay off" the transport minister because he was obviously tired and suffering ill health.

Jack Murta (PC—Lisgar) the official transport critic in the Tory shadow cabinet put several questions to him on the removal of the freight rate freeze.

Not satisfied with the answers, Murta asked: "Has the minister given any serious consideration to resigning his position and allowing someone else to take over?"

There has been speculation that in the next cabinet shuffle, not expected until the summer or fall, Prime Minister Trudeau will move Marchand out of transport into a less weighty post.

Marchand insisted the freeze was not related to new transportation policies. It had been applied independently of any promise of new policies.

His comment brought Tory Don Mazankowski to his feet on a point of privilege to "refresh the minister's memory."

Mazankowski insisted the minister was "perpetuating a distortion" by denying any connection between the freeze and new policies.

Campaign Gifts: Where Money Goes

OTTAWA (CP) — If you or your neighbor donate $100 to your local Liberal or Progressive Conservative riding association, $25 is skimmed off the top by the party and only $75 is returned to the association.

Revenue-sharing formulas have been formalized recently by the major political parties as a result of the new Election Expenses Act, which came into effect in August.

Only the NDP and the Social Credit Party have regularly deducted part of the money received through local associations to support the activities of their party offices.

The Liberals and Conservatives have traditionall allowed local constituency associations to keep money they collected themselves and have depended on direct donations to the national offices to support party activities.

The new law could change the pattern of financing by placing more emphasis on smaller donations at the riding level, rather than on large donations collected centrally according to John Laschinger, PC national director.

The act also allows donors to both political parties and candidates to receive tax credits, on a sliding scale ranging from 75 per cent for gifts of less than $100 to a maximum of $500 for gifts exceeding $1,150.

The Conservatives have named as their chief agent the PC Canada Fund, which is governed by a three-member board. All donations to local associations are made payable to the fund which cashes the cheques, and issues official receipts, says Laschinger.

When a donation is made to a local Liberal association, the money is sent to the party's provincial office which deducts 25 per cent for its own uses, said Charles Hill Graham, the party's fund-raising director.

In all provinces but Quebec, the Liberal association represents both provincial and federal interests.

In Quebec, there are two distinct organizations. The money for the federal party goes through the Quebec section of the Liberal Party of Canada.

Of the remaining 75 per cent, the local association receives 25 per cent and 50 per cent is put in a trust fund to be used by the official candidate in the riding in the next election.

Donations to the New Democratic Party have traditionally gone from the local to the provincial and national levels in a "trickle-up method of financing," said Cliff Scotton, party national director and chief agent.

All money collected locally goes to the provincial office of the party, which sends 15 per cent of the donation to the national office, he said.

Depending on the province, 15 to 40 per cent goes back to the riding level and 45 to 70 per cent stays with the provincial organization.

The new act has not forced any changes in revenue-sharing by the Social Credit party, says Gilles Caouette, a former MP and now the party's chief agent.

The party keeps 20 per cent of the donation and returns 80 per cent to the local association.

CIDA PROBE SET

OTTAWA (CP) — The operations of the Canadian International Development Agency will be studied by a commons committee sometime this year.

External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen gave Donald Munro (PC—Esquimalt-Saanich) assurance of that in the Commons Wednesday.

He could not say when the commons external affairs and defence committee will receive a reference that will permit the study. The minister said he thinks the operations of the Canadian aid agency should be studied.

ESCAPES DOWN

OTTAWA (CP)—A total of 458 prisoners excaped from federal penitentiaries during 1973, down from 623 in 1972, the Commons learned Wednesday.

Information tabled by Solicitor-General Warren Allmand said 421 of the 1973 escapees were caught compared with 590 the previous year. This left 37 at large in 1973 and 33 in 1972.

The totals include prisoners who broke out on their own, those who escaped from work areas outside cells and those who failed to return from temporary leaves.

OTTAWA (CP)—Solicitor-General Warren Allmand, strong opponent of capital punishment, said Wednesday he is looking seriously at measures to prevent murder.

He made the statement in the commons in response to questions from Social Credit leader Real Caouette who mentioned this week's mass murders and questioned the minister's attitude toward hanging.

Allmand did not expand on his statement and rushed off to catch a plane for Vancouver before reporters could question him.

He did say he was not necessarily thinking in terms of new legislation and that there could be administrative and other measures.

Caouette asked if capital punishment might prevent murder and Allmand replied that there is no intention to revise the law.

Under present law capital punishment is reserved for killers of police officers and prison guards. But the cabinet has commuted all death sentences for many years.

With recent murders of police officers on both coasts and highly-publicized killings elsewhere there have been calls for return of capital punishment.

Caouette—asked Allmand whether he would support a referendum on capital punishment. Allmand said it is not part of the constitutional system to regulate by referendum.

Caouette noted that the minister had said on television that capital punishment would not solve anything. He asked if the minister would hire a murderer to work for him as a rehabilitative measure.

Allmand ducked the question. He said his first goal is to recapture escaped prisoner Richard Blass, wanted in the Montreal murder investigation.

Old Inner-Tubes and a New Game

New and popular sports activity at University of Victoria is inner-tube water polo, which has blossomed into 26-team affair involving more than 300 players. Inner-tubes give players opportunities to rest and avoid dunkings in normally strenuous sports. And it's also a co-ed pasttime. However, there's still lots of frantic action, like this struggle for ball.

Starvation Hits Racing Empire

CHINO, Calif. (AP) — The thoroughbred horse racing empire of former Arizona cowboy Rex Ellsworth appeared to be crumbling Wednesday although the owner's son maintained it could be rebuilt.

Five horses at the Ellsworth ranch have died, apparently of starvation, and the Los Angeles Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals (SPCA) has taken over the feeding of 128 others.

In 1955, Ellsworth owned Kentucky Derby winner Swaps and was acclaimed as a top hand in the breeding field. Swaps had won the Santa Anita Derby and so did his Candy Spots in 1963, but this season he has no horses stabled at Santa Anita.

Dr. Kumen Ellsworth, the owner's son and a veterinarian who lives at the ranch east of Los Angeles, said: "We had a financial problem and we're in the process of moving the horses to our farm near Tucson, Ariz., where we raise our own feed. We had cut down on the feed but don't believe they were starving.

"We were holding our own here until the cold weather came and then we started moving our stock to Arizona. The SPCA action came as a surprise.

"We did have a problem with the money flow."

Asked about reports the thoroughbreds were worth $2 million, Dr. Ellsworth said, "It could be, but I don't know for sure."

Ed Cubrda, supervisor of the investigation department of the Los Angeles SPCA chapter, said 55 horses were impounded last Thursday when investigators said they found more than 100 broodmares near starvation. Twenty-six were impounded Saturday and 47 more on Sunday.

Asked about having no horses at Santa Anita, Dr. Ellsworth said, "We do have horses in the east who are ready to race."

He said the elder Ellsworth did not own the land on which their Chino ranch is located but does own the farm in Arizona where about one-half of the stock already has been moved.

He said the encroachment of civilization in the Chino area, with increases in taxes, had increased the problems of operation.

Also, Ellsworth horses have not been as successful at the tracks as they had been in the 1950-60 era and Mesh Tenney, another Arizonan who trained for Ellsworth, has left.

It was Ellsworth and Tenney who sent Swaps to the Kentucky Derby where he beat Nashua, only to lose in a return match race in Chicago.

Ellsworth and Tenney never treated thoroughbred horses as elite. Tenney sometimes used Swaps as a stable pony even though he earned $848,900 on the track under the red and black silks and was eventually sold for $2 million for breeding.

Penguins Deny Move, Trip Seals

By The Canadian Press

Pittsburgh Penguins, insisting they will not move to Seattle, took advantage of a California team that lost its coach and beat the Seals 7-5 in the only National Hockey League action Wednesday night.

Before Wednesday's game in Pittsburgh, the Seals announced in Oakland that coach Marshall Johnstone had been fired and that Bill McCreary, the league-owned club's director of hockey operations, will coach the Seals for the remainder of the season.

Meanwhile, Tad Potter, chief owner of the Penguins, attempted to put a damper on a league proposal to move his club to Seattle.

"The Penguins will not leave Pittsburgh," said Potter. "Any rumors that such a move is being contemplated are untrue."

He was commenting on a proposal announced at league meetings in Montreal on Tuesday that Seattle and Denver, in line for expansion franchises in 1976-77, might instead take over the financially-troubled California and Pittsburgh clubs.

Potter admitted the Penguins owe the league about $500,000 in back assessments and advances and that the club is trying to attract new investors.

The Penguins, laboring with high player salaries and low attendance, have received a "million-dollar commitment" from Pittsburgh interests to help the club, said Potter.

The Seals, under McCreary's coaching, never managed to take the lead in Wednesday's game although they pressed the Penguins throughout.

Chuck Arnason, Vic Hadfield, Barry Wilkins, Bob Kelly and Ron Schock also scored for Pittsburgh. Al MacAdam scored twice for the Seals while Stan Weir, Dave Hrechkosy and Bob Stewart added single goals.

The win was Pittsburgh's 18th this season against 17 losses and 10 ties, the first time the club has been better than .500 this season.

Rumors had circulated that Johnston would lose his job and the 33-year-old former Seals' defenceman said he was not surprised when he was fired.

"They told me Tuesday night that we had lost our last six games, or something like that, and they felt there was more talent on the team than I was getting out of it," said Johnston.

Scottish Still Coming

Although beset by travel problems, the touring Scottish curlers are still scheduled to play a draw of five matches at the Victoria Curling Club tonight at 9 p.m. and not at the Racquet Club as erroneously announced Wednesday.

However, the Scots were grounded in Winnipeg early this morning because of weather conditions and it was not known at press time what time they would arrive here and if they could fulfil their practice games at the Racquet Club in the afternoon. A dinner was also scheduled at the Racquet Club.

It is the second stop of a national tour for the Scots. At stake is the Strathcona Cup.

Basketball: Victoria Rates 'No. 1,' Twice

Some mid-week musings. . . . and the debate, if not exactly raging, is nonetheless continuing. Which is the top men's basketball team in our town? Is it the amazing Vikings of coach Gary Taylor, who lead the Canada West standings and are about to run off and hide with the title? Or would the veterans, the Scorpions, led by the remarkable Bob Burrows and coached by Howard Tooby, take the measure of the Collegians in a short series?

The Vikes drew first and the only blood in the annual Christmas tournament and that stung the Scorpions. But then supporters of the clothiers point to the fact that Brian MacKenzie of the Scorpions missed that game and, if he had been there, the result might have been reversed.

Since then, both teams have been just superior. The Vikes just seem to be getting better and better, and only this week hit their zenith for a college team in this city.

They bopped the Simon Fraser Clansmen for the first time ever and were handy 69-60 winners doing it; and if Jim Duddridge isn't the most improved player in town—quick, name who is.

★ ★ ★

Meanwhile, the Scorpions, who only asked the chance to compete with mainland clubs in a regularly scheduled league to prove they belonged, have done much more than that.

They have won the league title and right now must rank as having an excellent chance of going further along the playoff trail.

So Tooby must rate right up there with Taylor, and it's great, isn't it, to have two such fine coaches in town, both their teams on top, and more to the point, Victoria back where it belongs in the provincial basketball picture — front and centre where all can see. And even No. 1 Twice,

What the playoff scene will bring remains to be seen, but I think it would be an excellent idea if before that, or at least before the students get embroiled in their studies for final exams, that the Vikes and Scorpions get together again.

Who knows, there still may be a trophy of sorts, emblematic of the city championship, sitting around gathering dust in someone's cellar; and there would be some rather famous names engraved on it too. Perhaps it could be put up for grabs again. Otherwise, there always would be the honor and the glory; and besides, then there wouldn't be any doubt as to which is the best club, would there?

So why not? Well!

Otherwise, and it may not generally be recalled, but when Mayor Jean Drapeau of Montreal was bidding for the 1976 summer Olympics in Amsterdam in 1970, he was asked for a financial guarantee. But he declined, neatly, by stating: "The history of Montreal is our guarantee . . . it is a history of meeting and beating the challenges . . .". Well, the little man who won a personal victory then with his low-key campaign to get the Olympics, now has them, and a mounting bill as well. And just who is going to pay is still the big question.

So for Drapeau the growing headache continues. And if at first it was only about $400 million that Montreal would get sandbagged for, the central stadium alone now is earmarked at $380 million. The overall total is over $600 million that someone will get whacked. But really, nobody is kidding anybody when they say they didn't know all of this at the very beginning.

Where will it end and what will Canada do? For if the Olympics; as their former Godfather Avery Brundage suggested in his final speech at Munich are getting too big for their britches, does that excuse Montreal, or Quebec, or in this case, all of Canada. Do we get out now, save money, but lose face. Or do we stay in, pay up, and grin and bear it?

Frankly, I feel that Prime Minister Trudeau was attempting to be sincere in stating that the federal government has done all it will do in assisting to finance the Games and that Montreal and Quebec can ante up the rest between them. And will.

But now that preparations, if temporarily stalled, have gone this far, is it too late to opt out? That's another poser. Perhaps, but then there's still the fear that with the current labor problems, et al, that the city itself might not be ready. And wouldn't that be a stunner? So who knows?

Personally, I think the Games will go on and if they do, Canada and Canadians will make the most of the opportunity. And all our young athletes will get a chance to show off, and proudly too.

It's so easy to be a critic, and keep harping "I told you so." But the main trouble with most critics is the older they get the more they forget how to think young again.

Nite all.

Oiler Reserve Admits He Met With Drug Girl

By The Associated Press

Solomon Freelon, a reserve guard with Houston Oilers, told The Associated Press Wednesday night that he met the woman who claims to have delivered narcotics to numerous National Football League players and let her spend a night in his apartment.

But Freelon said she showed him no drugs and he accepted her story that she was a medical researcher from Ghana studying the relationship of water pollution to cancer.

"I didn't see any dope and she didn't have anything that looked like it carried dope," Freelon said. "That never entered my mind because she seemed too interested in water poisoning."

Freelon was the first NFL player to acknowledge publicly having had any contact with Roxie Ann Rice, 19, who was arrested Jan. 4 in St. Louis on charges of defrauding an innkeeper and of fraudulently using a credit card, allegedly stolen from Washington Redskins' defensive back Ken Houston.

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat reports that Houston gave the St. Louis police a statement in which he, too, acknowledged having been in contact with Miss Rice.

Houston said a woman claiming to be from Africa stayed with him and his wife for two days in Reston, Va., after which a pocket calculator and a charge card were missing.

Houston said he met that woman through another who said her name was Pat, that she worked for a national magazine and that the publication wanted to do a story on him.

Miss Rice, who has allegedly passed herself off as a writer, doctor and medical researcher, was to undergo a lie detector test today to evaluate her story, St. Louis police said.

A 39-page intra-departmental police memo in St. Louis quotes Miss Rice as saying she was recruited to transport briefcases containing what she believed to be narcotics to many NFL cities and that she became familiar with players and took orders and delivered drugs.

Police officials and spokesmen for a number of NFL teams also have refused to comment on the report or have denied knowledge of any of the woman's alleged activities.

Among the teams mentioned in the police memo are the Oilers, Redskins, St. Louis Cardinals, San Diego Chargers, Detroit Lions, Kansas City Chiefs and Cincinnati Bengals.

Freelon said that, during the 1974 season, he received a phone call from a woman who said her name was Pat and that she worked for a national magazine.

"She wanted to know if I would pose for some pictures and if my wife would object," Freelon said. "I told her I was single and that I would pose.

"A few days later, she called back and said a friend of hers was coming to Houston to look for a job and asked if I would pick her up a the airport and help her. She said her friend's name was Roxie Ann Rice."

Freelon, who described her as being about 5-foot-10 and 250 pounds, said that, at that time, he was staying in a motel with the Oilers the night before the Nov. 24 game against the Dallas Cowboys

The police statement says Miss Rice told officers she posed as a Ghanaian named Adiza Juzang in her dealings with players.

The Kansas City Star, however, published a photograph Wednesday of a Dr. Juzang who was allegedly in Kansas City for a game between the Chiefs and the Minnesota Vikings. St. Louis police identified the woman in the photograph as being Roxie Ann Rice.

Late Rally Gives Hotelmen Victory

Hotel Douglas finished off a second-half rally in dramatic style by scoring eight straight points in the dying minutes of the game en route to a 72-66 decision over Victoria Junior Men in a Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League game at Spectrum Community School.

Jim Griffin sparked Junior's hopes of an upset in the early going with 12 points but was shut out in the second half. Doug Irving led Junior scorers with 20 points.

WALTON'S SURGE NOT ENOUGH

By The Associated Press

Bill Walton is getting used to playing in the National Basketball Association but isn't getting used to losing.

The centre for Portland Trail Blazers had his best game in the NBA Wednesday night, but wasn't happy with it because of the final results.

"We lost," was Walton's only answer to a reporter's question about his 25-point, 11-rebound performance during Portland's 96-94 loss to Detroit Pistons.

Lanier finished with 25 points and Curtis Rowe also added 25—his best output of the season. Dave Bing scored 22 for Detroit.

In other NBA games, Washington Bullets stopped Kansas City-Omaha Kings 97-88 and Boston Celtics beat New Orleans Jazz 110-102.

In the American Basketball Association, Kentucky Colonels whipped Memphis Sounds 114-91, Indiana Pacers trimmed Denver Nuggets 120-110, and the Spirits of St. Louis beat San Diego Conquistadors 129-124 in overtime.

A Full-Time Effort

By The Canadian Press

Don Borgeson, after kicking around the minor leagues for eight years, appears to be skating himself to a full-time job with the World Hockey Association's Phoenix Roadrunners.

Borgeson, a five-foot-11 left winger from North Battleford, Sask., scored three goals Wednesday night to carry the Roadrunners to an 8-5 victory over Chicago Cougars.

Borgeson's first goal of the game and 14th of the season pulled Phoenix into a 4-4 tie midway in the second period after Chicago had gone ahead.

Then, after John Gray's goal midway in the third period gave the Roadrunners a 6-5 lead, Borgeson scored two more to clinch the victory.

In other games Wednesday, Indianapolis Racers beat Winnipeg Jets 3-1 and Vancouver Blazers upset Minnesota Fighting Saints 2-1.

Borgeson, 29, is a rookie in the WHA after eight years in the American, Central, Eastern, and Western International leagues.

Murray Keogan chipped in with two goals for Phoenix, which pulled to within eight points of the leading Houston Aeros in the Western Division.

The expansion Roadrunners have a 21-18-6 record but drew only 5,128 fans.

At St. Paul, Minn., a crowd of 6,660 saw the Fighting Saints' 20th loss in 41 games, leaving them in fourth place in the West.

The win for Vancouver, on the other hand, moved them up to fourth in the Canadian Division, leaving Winnipeg alone in the cellar.

Minnesota's Mike Walton returned to action after a groin injury but left the game in the second period after suffering a three-stitch cut over his left eye.

'Give Bernie a Run,' Said Till So Crump Ran Over Everyone

RUGBY
max low

It must be tough when a coach tries to weaken his side to take pity on floundering opponents — and strenthens it instead.

But that's what happened to Tillman Briggs last weekend during a two-game tour of Oregon and Washington by his Crimson Tide team. And what happened led to the "discovery" of a bright young star who, says Tillman, just may have played himself into the Victoria Rugby Union's rep squad.

Bernie Crump, an 18-year-old former Vic High student, coached there by Briggs, now plays for James Bay Athletic Association. Last weekend, he was asked to make the trip to play in a Tide "B" team.

"But when I got to the bus, Tillman said sorry boys, the games for the "B" team have been cancelled," Crump said this week.

He decided to go along anyway as a "supporter" and then Briggs found himself shorthanded. There was Stu Barber, who was recovering from a broken nose; Cliff Yorath and Dave Docherty, who were both unable to go, and Chuck Shergold, who missed the ferry.

The tide was supposed to play a full Oregon State rep team, but the Americans put up only a city of Portland rep squad and that was a mistake.

"We were hammering them and so, late in the game, I decided to take Rod Fiddick (an experienced centre or winger) off and give Bernie a run," said Briggs.

But that didn't quite work. Crump, ha da run, all sive centre, had a run, all right — right through the opposition and over for a try in his first five minutes of action. And he was still running the Americans off their feet when the game ended soon after with the score 49-0.

Things were tougher for the Tide on Sunday when they took on Washington State reps in Seattle. Washington has beaten Lansdowne of Ireland and the Emus, an Australian under-23 team, and Tillman knew they would be hard to beat.

Winger Wes Thomas had been injured late in Saturday's game and so Crump got to play the whole of the second match.

There were only three penalty goals scored as the Tide clung to a 6-3 lead until late in the match. Then, with 10 minutes left, the fast Victoria backs, led by Crump with some tricky runs, raced over for three tries and it ended 18-3.

BERNIE CRUMP
. . . football and rugby

Briggs had lots of praise for Crump, who he described as "a fine athlete, a great competitor with lots of drive." Bernie hopes to go to the University of British Columbia where he'll play both rugby and Canadian football, another sport at which he excels.

"He's playing so well at the moment that the Tide selectors have to consider him now," said Briggs.

Next action for the Tide is against the Wainuiomata Club of Wellington, New Zealand, in Victoria next month and then a match in the McKechnie Cup competition for the B.C. inter-union championship on March 1. That one will be against Fraser Valley and — believe it or not — will be played in Seattle.

That's because Washington State has five clubs in the Fraser Valley Union's competition and the Americans have asked for a turn at staging a cup match.

The Tide, which battled to a 10-10 tie with UBC Thunderbirds last season and ended up sharing the McKechnie Cup, was beaten 14-12 by the Birds this season and clings to the hope Vancouver will topple UBC.

"Then we tackle Vancouver on April Fool's Day and it may all hinge on that," says Briggs.

Flyers Blank Braves

Other Flyer marksmen were Dale Irving, Lee Clackson, Ray Stubbington, Doug Lafleur, Don Stubbington and Terry Puska.

Grant Clozza made 26 saves while recording the shutout. At the other end of the ice, Gordie Mitchell had little time for rest, making 55 stops for Saanich.

Stockers, Lakers Post Wins

Lake Cowichan Lakers and Stockers North Americans chaked up victories Wednesday night to maintain their respective one-two positions atop the South Island Big Six Hockey League.

Lakers tripped Ingraham Buckaroos 5-3 at Lake Cowichan Arena while Stockers connected for all their goals in the third period to defeat James Bay Athletic Association Canadians 7-3 at Juan de Fuca Arena.

Rick Boyd led Lake Cowichan with two goals while Doug Hanna, Jim Peterson and Ed Croteau fired singles. Larry Meyers (2) and Ken Waet replied for Bucks.

Jerry Blanchette (3), Murray Southern (2), Bayden Robinson and Rugs Pritchard scored for Stockers while Darryl Ell hammered in all three goals for Canadians.

Gold Rush in N.Z.

Times News Services

CHRISTCHURCH, N.Z. — John Beers of Merritt, B.C., high-jumped seven feet, 1½ inches today to capture a gold medal for Canada at the New Zealand games.

Beers' best jump beat runner-up Gordon Windeyer of Australia by 2¾ inches. Larry Sayers of Australia was third.

A student at the University of British Columbia, Beers holds the Canadian record for the high jump with a leap of seven feet, 4¼ inches.

Miss Smith's time of two minutes, 23.23 seconds beat the mark set by Leslie Cliff of Vancouver when she won the same event here at the Commonwealth Games last year. In that contest, Miss Cliff won with a games record time of 2:24.13.

Today, Miss Smith had a comfortable margin over Jenni Franks of the United States who was second in 2:25.07 while Lynne Rowe of New Zealand was third in 2.28.38.

The 15-year-old Edmonton swimmer, close to ears after two false starts, led all the way to notch her best time.

Canadian record-holder Brenda Eisler of Burnaby was second in the women's long jump with a leap of 20 feet, 6½ inches. Martha Watson of the U.S. won the event with a jump of 21 feet. Pam Hendren of New Zealand was third.

Maureen Crowley of Vancouver lost the women's 800-metre final by a full second, finishing in 2:06.2 behind Charlene Rendina of Australia. Miss Rendina, the Commonwealth Games titleholder, had pain-killing injections before the start. Robin Campbell of the U.S. was third.

Robert Martin of Paris, Ont., ran the men's 100-metre final in 10.74 seconds and had to settle for a fifth-place finish. Lanky Steve Biddick of the U.S. won the event.

JOE LOUIS TOP MAN IN BOXING

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe Louis has been named The Man of the Half Century by the United States Boxing Writers Association.

The Brown Bomber, who won the world heavyweight crown in 1937 and held it for 12 years, won over Jack Dempsey and Muhammad Ali in a poll commemorating the 50th anniversary of the writers' group.

The period covers 1925 to 1975.

Louis, 61, received 28 first-place votes and 144 points. Dempsey was second with 18 first-place votes and 96 points, followed by Ali, the current champion, with 14 firsts and 90 points.

Following, in order, came Sugar Ray Robinson, the late Nat Fleischer (publisher of Ring Magazine), Rocky Marciano and Henry Armstrong.

Title Bout Protested In Britain

LONDON (AP) — The British Boxing Board of Control urged the World Boxing Council Wednesday not to recognize the scheduled world heavyweight title fight between Muhammad Ali and Chuck Wepner.

In a strongly-worded statement, the board said it had sent a cable to the WBC asking the ruling body to say it "will be no party" to the fight scheduled for Cleveland on March 24. The board thinks Britain's European champion, Joe Mugner, should meet Ali for the title.

Wepner, a 32-year-old liquor salesman from Bayonne, N.J., is unranked in world lists. He was stopped because of cuts in three rounds by Bugner in 1970.

Bugner is listed fourth in heavyweight rankings and the Hungarian-born Briton went the distance, but lost on points, to Ali in Las Vegas in 1973.

Yorkton On Move

OSHAWA (CP) — Yorkton Parkland, the Saskatchewan representative, stood a good chance of moving into championship contention in two games today at the Canadian midget hockey tournament.

Yorkton ran its record to 3-0 with a 4-1 victory Wednesday over winless Sydney, N.S. Legionaires. Today Yorkton goes against another winless club, Thunder Bay Miners, and Barrie Co-op, which has a 2-0 record.

In Wednesday's other action, Fort Garry-Fort Rogue beat Charlottetown 7-0, Oshawa defeated Thunder Bay 6-4, Quesnel beat Corner Brook 3-1, Edmonton defeated South Ottawa Canadians 3-1 and Barrie beat Sydney 7-1.

Defenceman Bruno Rogger's two goals led Quesnel to its first win in three starts.

Tuesday's All-Star Game: Did It Have Any Meaning?

MONTREAL (UPI) — In the wake of what amounted to a colorful disaster on ice, it followed naturally that players and officials alike considered ways of adding new zest to the National Hockey League all-star game

Not only did Tuesday night's internationally televised affair end in a non-competitive 7-1 rout, but the fans had difficulty identifying with the rival teams.

For the record, it was the Prince of Wales Conference skating roughshod over the Clarence Campbell Conference, two groupings that are of little significance even to the players. There is absolutely no kind of rivalry between the two conferences, such as exists, for example, between the American and National Leagues in baseball, and there was nothing for the players on either side to prove, such as in previous games when the expansion division was matched against the older teams.

One solution that was suggested would be to revert to another old format for the game, having the previous season's Stanley Cup champion challenge the rest of the league.

"It's hard for them to build up any animosities under these conditions," said Fred Shero, coach of the Stanley Cup champion Philadelphia Flyers and the leader of the Clarence Campbell Conference. "If an all-star team pplayed against the cup champions, you might see some animosities there. Everyone likes to beat the best."

Shero, who wasn't particularly proposing a change of format, does feel that more time should be allowed for the all-star teams to prepare for the game.

"I'd like to see the teams come in one day earlier. This would give them the chance to have a real practice, to talk over how they'd like to play the game, to work the lines that are going to play together," Shero said.

Ken Dryden, the big Montreal Canadien goaltender who played for the Prince of Wales Conference, would just as soon see things stay as they are.

"It is very much looked at by the players as a break between the two halves of the season," Dryden said. "The players arrive here looking to the game for what it is, a break in the schedule and a chance to be with great players. I don't think there should be any animosity in an all-star game."

Both Shero and his rival all-star coach, Bep Guidolin, had another suggestion to add more interest to the game. They proposed that in the future each of the teams showcase to the fans an all-rookie line and an all-rookie defensive unit. There wasn't a single rookie among the 40 players in Tuesday night's contest even though there are about 85 freshmen playing for the 18 teams

"There are a lot of good rookies in this league and they deserve to be seen," said Guidolin. "It would be great for the fans if each of the teams in the all-star game and all-rookie units which could be matched against each other."

Broncos Corraled

LETHBRIDGE (CP) — Kamloops Chiefs scored two goals within 31 seconds early in the first period and another pair in just 17 seconds later in the same period to take an early lead and went on to defeat Lethbridge Broncos 8-4 in Western Canada Hockey League action Wednesday.

Brad Kerr, who paced the Chiefs with three goals, and Brad Gassoff scored at 4:26 and 4:57 respectively. Kerr scored again at 17:01 and Mal Zinger at 17:18 th give the Chiefs a lead they never relinquished.

Completing the Kamloops scoring were Neil Lyseng, Dave Hatheway and Craig Totolinsky. Ron Delorme with two and Jerry Banks and Terry Bucyk replied for the Broncos.

SPORTS EVENTS IN DANGER

High school basketball officials have been among the busiest planners during the past couple of days as the possibility of a strike or lockout of civic outside workers threatens to disrupt sports schedules in the Greater Victoria area.

Local 50 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees broke off negotiations with the city Wednesday and if the situation produces a lockout or strike, several schools and the area's four arenas — Memorial, Juan de Fuca, Esquimalt and G. R. Pearkes — could become unavailable for athletic events.

Operating engineers at Memorial Arena are not members of CUPE and it appears probable that the arena management is prepared for an attempt to continue with at least the two major events scheduled at Memorial Arena this week.

Harlem Globetrotters are slated to make their annual basketball appearance at the Blanshard Street structure Friday and Victoria Cougars are scheduled to play a Western Canada Hockey League game Saturday.

High school basketball officials have worked out plans to switch several league games to schools in the Sooke and Saanich school districts — Parkland, Dunsmuir, Belmont and Claremont.

Royal Athletic Park and Crystal Pool would also be affected by a strike or lockout and curling activities could be disrupted at Esquimalt. Soccer and rugby action at open parks might be curtailed or stopped.

Basketball games and other athletic events at the University of Victoria should continue as scheduled, but Victoria Scorpions of the Dogwood Senior "A" Men's Basketball League may wind up with a problem. Scorpions are slated to play a weekend doubleheader at Central Junior High School.

UVic Series Sells Itself

For what it's worth, this is national basketball week, putting it right up there with national maid-of-cotton week and national goldfish week.

The point is, it's no different than any other week for basketball's super-salesmen, people like Canadian coach Jack Donohue, UVic Viking coach Gary Taylor or Oak Bay coach Don Horwood. They boost the game every week.

This Friday and Saturday, Taylor has a doubleheader that sells itself and so, for that matter, has UVic Vikette coach Mike Gallo.

Vikings take on Alberta Golden Bears at 8:30 both nights while the Vikettes meet Alberta Pandas in 6:30 preliminaries. UVic Jayvees, meanwhile, tangle with Vancouver Douglas College in 4:30 games, all at the McKinnon Building.

Vikings have lost only two Canada West men's league games so far this season and both were to Alberta in last November's openers in Edmonton. Since then, they have reeled off 10 straight wins and hold a six-point bulge over the second-place Bears, who have two games in hand. Doug Baker and Glenn Olson are Alberta's big scoring guns.

Vikettes swept both their opening games against Pandas but needed a Diane Robbie basket in the last eight seconds for one of those victories.

Vikettes can't afford to drop one this weekend. They're also in first place, but only two points ahead of second-place UBC Thunderettes, who also have two games in hand. The key series in the Canada West women's league could be the UVic-at-UBC doubleheader Feb. 7 and 8.

Erratic Weiskopf Escapes Penalty

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Tom Weiskopf was cleared Wednesday of charges that he failed to exert his best effort in the second round of last week's Dean Martin-Tucson Open golf tournament.

The sometimes temperamental star — twice subject to disciplinary action for similar offences — last week was accused by Tucson tournament director Biff Baker of failing to play in a professional manner.

The offense is a violation of the by-laws of the Tournament Players Division of the Professional Golfers Association.

Weiskopf failed to qualify for the final two rounds of the Tuscon tournament. He played his last nine holes in 41 strokes, twice taking a score of seven on a hole, and had a 148 total for two rounds.

Commissioner Deane Beman said in a prepared release that "the evidence in this case supports Weiskopf's contention that his play, though erratic, represents his best efforts under existing playing conditions."

Third Straight Trip To Cup Soccer Final

LONDON (CP) — For the third successive year manager Ron Saunders has taken a club to the English League Cup soccer final.

His latest team, Aston Villa, defeated Fourth Division Chester, 3-2, Wednesday to advance against Norwich, which defeated Manchester United of the Second Division, 1-0, in the other semi-final.

Two years ago, Saunders was in charge of a Norwich club which reached the final. In 1974, he was successful with Manchester City.

Aston Villa, held to a 2-2 tie in the first leg of the semi-final, appeared to be on the way to an easy victory in the semi-final contest when Tom Leonard scored goals in the 19th and 27th minuets.

Colin Suggett scored the only goal which gave Norwich a 3-2 aggregate in its second-leg contest with Manchester United.

Plan Abandoned

TORONTO (CP) — The idea of having Canada's national soccer team playing and living together in one city has been abandoned, at least for the present.

John McMahon, the team's general manager, said the team selection and its methods of training will return to the old format.

"What it means is that the team will continue to play as a unit, but we'll have to call on the players from across the country when we need them," said McMahon.

Decision to suspend the "team in being" concept, with national team members all residing in one city, was taken at a meeting of the Canadian Soccer Association.

Tillicum Tourney Friday

Reynolds Roadrunners and Esquimalt Dockers will co-host Belmont Braves and five out-of-town teams in the third annual Tillicum high school boys basketball tournament starting Friday.

Other teams competing in the 26-game event are Kelowna, Penticton, Prince George, Grand Forks and Carson Graham of North Vancouver.

The tournament is separated into two groups of four teams with one group playing all games at Reynolds and the other playing at Esquimalt. The consolation game between runners-up from the two groups will be at 7:30 p.m. Saturday at Reynolds with the final between the group winners scheduled for 9 p.m. on the same boards.

Oak Bay Bays, the defending champions, have declined to enter the tourney this year and will play host to a pair of exhibition games. They play Richmond at 7 p.m. Friday and Cowichan at 8 p.m. Saturday.

Other members of the Greater Victoria League are entered in out-of-town tournaments. Mt. Douglas Rams are in Vancouver for the Tech tournament, Parkland Panthers are in the Terrace tournament and Victoria High will be competing in the Totem tournament in Port Alberni.

Draw for the Tillicum tournament:

FRIDAY

Coho Swimmer Wins Three Races

Jennifer Patton, an eight-year-old member of Juan de Fuca cohos, emerged as the top individual winner during a recent four-club development meet at Centennial Pool.

Miss Patton won the freestyle, backstroke and breaststroke events and finished second in the butterfly. Other teams in the meet were Saanich Swim Club, Victoria Olympians and Port Alberni Swim Club.

Lark Flies Late

MIAMI Buffalo Lark dropped back after breaking on top at the start Wednesday at Hialeah, then rallied through the stretch to win the 33rd running of the $33,300 Palm Beach Handicap on turf.

Koreans To Vote

SEOUL (WP) — President Park Chung Hee Wednesday announced a national referendum within a few weeks to validate his rule in the face of growing opposition. He said he would resign from office if the vote goes against him.

Like a previous referendum which backed his role a few months after his seizure of unchecked power, the forthcoming balloting evidently will be held under tightly-controlled conditions. A little-noticed law adopted by cabinet decree nearly two years ago prohibits any expressions of opinion by public, press or politicians about referendum issues, and bars political party members from acting as ballot box observers.

Opposition reaction was immediately negative on grounds that the vote will be neither free nor fair under present conditions. The major opposition New Democratic Party scheduled a meeting to take an official stand.

The splinter-group Democratic Unification Party denounced the plan, even before the official announcement, as a "sinister scheme" to extend Park's power.

The Korean Christian Student Federation, most of whose national officers are imprisoned for opposing Park's rule, demanded that political prisoners be released prior to a national vote, and called for revisions in the referendum rules.

FBI Cannot Purge Its Files

WASHINGTON (AP) Clarence Kelley, director of the United States Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI), says he cannot legally purge the agency's files of derogatory and unproven allegations against members of Congress.

He said in an interview Wednesday he has no plans either to suggest or to oppose legislative changes restricting the future collection of such material or allowing destruction of that already in the files.

"I can only say we abide by the law and will abide by any restrictive legislation," Kelley said.

Kelley and other officials said that the FBI, like all government agencies, cannot destroy official records without specific written approval from national archivist James Rhoads.

Rhoads' deputy, James O'Neill, agreed that present laws would not permit the destruction of most records kept by the FBI on members of Congress and others.

A House of Representatives judiciary subcommittee has scheduled hearings beginning Jan. 30 on the FBI practice of keeping information about members of Congress. The subcommittee may consider legislative changes.

Kelley acknowledged that some of the unproven allegations in the files deal with the personal lives of members of Congress.

He noted that the files contain data on congressmen who have been the subjects of criminal investigations and on those who have been considered for other federal jobs.

The files also contained 22 years' worth of biographical and campaign material on congressmen which agents gathered from public sources in a program designed to acquaint FBI officials with new congressmen. L. Patrick Gray stopped the program when he was FBI acting director in 1972, but the law thwarted his efforts to destroy the material.

Helms Explains CIA Role

WASHINGTON (WP)—Former CIA Director Richard M. Helms was quoted as telling the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Wednesday that if there was CIA infiltration of American radical groups, it occurred without his knowledge.

Sen. Gale W. McGee (D-Wwy.) who gave that report, said the three-hour closed hearing was devoted almost entirely to questioning Helms about his previous congressional testimony.

It was unclear how Helms related his statement that he was unaware of any CIA involvement in domestic spying.

After the hearing Wednesday four commitee members who commented publicly said they were satisfied with Helms' testimony on the CIA's controversial role in this country and Chile.

Sen. John Sparkman (D-Ala.) Foreign Relations Committee chairman, called Helms' answers "full and frank." "As far as I'm concerned, I'd be glad for this to end it," Sparkman said in regard to the committee's questioning of Helms.

CIA Director William E. Colby, Helms' successor as head of the super-secret intelligence agency, last week acknowledged that the CIA had spied on American journalists and political dissenters, opened the mail of private citizens, panted informers inside domestic protest groups and assembled the agency's own secret files on more than 10,000 Americans.

Helms said that the CIA, which he headed from 1966 to 1973, had not been involved in any wrongdoing.

ARMS RUN GAUNTLET

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — A battered Mekong River ammunition convoy reached Phnom Penh today through a gauntlet of Communist rebel fire to break a 26-day siege of the Cambodian capital. American-piloted cargo planes flew supplies into the Phnom Penh airport despite rocket attacks that closed the field to civilian traffic.

Shipping sources said the convoy of two tugs towing two barges brought in some badly-needed fuel and food with the ammunition but that Khmer Rogue rebels laid down such a heavy barrage of rocket fire from the banks of the Mekong that the rest of the convoy with other food and fuel had to turn back.

Every one of the four vessels had been hit before they reached Phnom Penh at noon today, and they underwent a rocket attack while anchoring. One mortar round landed in the middle of a huge barge loaded with hundreds of tons of U.S. ammunition, but failed to detonate munitions.

Rebel gunners across the river from downtown Phnom Penh fired three shells at the convoy anchoring in the harbor. Two shells hit the water and one hit the barge, wounding several persons.

Cambodian foot soldiers are on an operation to clear the so-called "rocket belt" to about four miles southeast of Pochentong, but so far have reported no progress.

Air Waves 'Public Property'

OTTAWA (CP)—American television and radio stations have no legal rights in their signals in Canadian air space, says Mr. Justice Arthur Thurlow of the Federal Court of Appeal in a judgment published Wednesday.

The judge said that radio frequencies in Canadian Air space are public property under the Broadcasting Act.

When American stations put out signals on any frequency "they make use of the public property in the frequencies but they do not by so doing acquire any right either in the frequency or the signals they have generated on it."

"And they have no right to have their signals received in Canada in any form, whether altered or unaltered," said Mr. Justice Thurlow.

"Nor do they have any right to require that the licence of a Canadian boradcasting receiving undertaking conform to their requirements or demands," he added.

Judge Thurlow made the comments in agreeing with two other Federal Court justices that the Canadian Radio-Television Commission acted within its powers in authorizing Rogers Cable TV Ltd. of Toronto to delete certain commercial messages from three Buffalo stations.

Rogers began deleting some commercials in 1972 after the CRTC issued a policy statement saying cable outlets could do so.

But the CRTC said the cable companies should not themselves sell replacement commercials. They should make arrangements with Canadian television stations to do so.

Buffalo stations WGR, WBEN and WKBW threatened legal action when Rogers substituted its own messages for their commercials.

The CRTC then amended the Rogers licence approving public interest messages as substitutes for the commercials.

In the Federal Court, the stations argued that the provinces alone had jurisdiction over cable television and that the federal commission had no right to make the amendment to the Rogers licence.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A convicted armed robber charged with theft only five days after his release from jail has been returned to prison for three more months.

Alphonse Alexander Plesses was sentenced by Judge William Ostler in Victoria provincial court Wednesday.

Plessis, 41, pleaded guilty to three charges including shoplifting a $40 radio from Eaton's July 13, violating the Wildlife Act on July 14 and failing to appear in court July 15 on the theft charge.

The second charge was laid after police, checking his car in Goldstream campgrounds, discovered on the back seat two rifles for which he had no permit.

Ostler noted the accused had been released from Snowden prison camp near Campbell River on July 8 after serving a two-year less a day for armed robbery in Colwood in February, 1973.

Plessis, appearing with his right arm in a sling, said he had been in a traffic accident in August and had only recently been discharged from hospital.

He said his arm gave him considerable pain. Shaking his head slowly he remarked, "I'm sorry about taking the radio . . . I really am."

A 22-year-old American pleaded guilty to possession of counterfeit money and passing bogus bills but will have to wait to Feb. 4 to hear his sentence.

James David Bahr had been picked up earlier this month after two bogus $50 bills turned up in Victoria stores. Six other bills were found on him at the time of arrest, police said.

Defence counsel Ted Pollard told the court Bahr's real name was Kenneth Ward and that he originally came from Houston. He said Ward arrived in Canada last April.

Prosecutor Clarence Vause read out a partial record which included a conviction for theft in the U.S. in July 1972. Vause said Bahr was wanted in Tuscon for sale of heroin and in Saskatchewan for theft of licence plates.

He asked for a pre-sentence report in order to get the record straight and to aid the judge in passing sentence.

But Pollard objected. He urged a short definite sentence and said once the term had been completed Ward would be deported. He suggested an immediate sentence would be a practical solution.

Ostler replied, "I do not propose a sentence on the basis of practicality . . . the man stands convicted and must be treated as any other person . . . it would not be proper for me to pass sentence without a presentence report."

In traffic court Frederich Robert Perrott, 65, of 1259 Goldstream, was sentenced to 14 days in jail after pleading guilty to impaired driving in the 1100-block Goldstream Monday.

Judge Fred Green ordered the sentence be served intermittently on weekends beginning this Saturday. He also prohibited Perrott from driving for one year.

Ian Gordon Grassick, 46, of 1159 Beach, Richard Ernest Nussle, 29, of 2928 Phipps, and David John Leicester, 20, of 4305 Savoy, were ordered to attend the impaired driving course after convictions for impaired driving.

In Judge Fred Green's traffic court Peter Henry London, 35, of 10775 McDonald Park Road, was sentenced to 14 days in jail after pleading guilty to impaired driving on Sayward on Friday. It was his second conviction in two months, police said, and thus carried a mandatory jail term.

Fred Dennis, 1463 May, was fined $300 for impaired driving on Sutlej Street April 14. Green also placed him on six months probation and prohibited him from driving for 15 months.

The Making of a Bum: Sinatra Vs. the Press

I try, of course, to stick to the parish issues, as a columnist should, but I have in mind today a few words in defence of Mr. Frank Sinatra, the singer and actor and a sort of hero of mine since the world was young.

We don't see too much of it here, but anyone who has access to the American daily newspapers will know that one of the classic cases of character assassination in American history is now being mounted against a performer whose only crime has been his rugged individualism.

In paper after American paper you will find commentators exulting in the fact that Sinatra, having come out of retirement, was in obviously poor voice in his most recent recital at Madison Square Garden. There is no logic in it, whatever, but clearly this is being used vindictively against a performer who has been notoriously non-cooperative with the press and who, in fact, has a rather lofty contempt for it.

The details of his troubles in an Australian visit, including his earthy descriptions of the news-women of that country, are being dragged out once more to document the thesis that he is America's worst travelling ambassador.

Anyone familiar with Sinatra's relations with the press may be forgiven for taking a different view. Since he first came into prominence he's been the target for the gossip-mongers, never accepted as a man with ideas. In Australia, famous for its gutter press, he was asked questions that were not merely frivolous, but embarrassing. He'd every right to categorize them as the ink-stained harlots they are.

Even in a nation such as the U.S.A. where yesterday's hero is so often tomorrow's bum it is hard to find any logical reason for the attack he's now under. At a time when most men are thinking about going out to pasture he was selected by his peers as The Entertainer of the Year. He is still far and away the most sensitive interpreter of popular music. He is a man revered in his profession for his unpublicized generosity.

It's an interesting exercise to go back through the files and to find those occasional serious interviews in which Sinatra was able to come across as one magazine editor wrote of him, as "a complex, articulate and thoughful man."

Here, for example, is Sinatra, on his communication with an audience: "You have to reach out to them with total honesty and humility. That goes for any kind of human contact, a politician on television, an actor in the movies, or a guy and a gal. That's as true in life as it is in art."

He was asked once if he had any religious feelings, if he believed in God, and replied, "I'm not unmindful of man's seeming need for faith. But for me religion is a deeply personal thing in which man and God go it alone together without the witch doctor in the middle. The witch doctor tries to convince us that we have to ask God for help, to spell out to him what we need, even to bribe him with prayer or cash on the line. Well, I believe that God knows what each of us wants and needs. It's not necessary for us to make it to church on Sunday to reach Him. You can find Him any place."

And on organized religion: "There are things which I resent. Christ is revered as the Prince of Peace, but more blood has been shed in His name than any other figure in history. You show me one step forward in the name of religion and I'll show you a hundred retrogressions. Remember that leering, cursing lynch mob in Little Rock reviling a meek, innocent little 12-year-old Negro girl as she tried to enrol in a public school? Weren't they — or most of them — devout church-goers? I detest the two-faced who pretend liberality but are practiced bigots in their own mean little spheres. I'm for decency—period. I'm for anything and everything that bodes love and consideration for my fellow man. But when lip service to some mysterious diety permits bestiality on Wednesday and absolution on Sunday—cash me out."

Long before they were popular notions in American Sinatra was advocating the recognition of China, a ban on nuclear testing and a detente with the Soviet Union.

Of the United Nations, he told an interviewer: "It seems to me that a lot of us consider the UN a private club — our's, of course—with gentleman's agreements just like any other exclusive club. I don't happen to think you can kick 800 million Chinese under the rug and simply pretend that they don't exist. If the UN doesn't represent the United Nations of the world, then what the hell have you got? Not democracy—and certainly not world government."

On nuclear testing: "I think it's got to stop and I think it will stop. Both sides have to live on this planet and leaders in all countries know that their children and grandchildren have to live here, too . . . Fear is the enemy of logic. There is no more debilitating, crushing, self-defeating, sickening thing in the world — to an individual or to a nation."

It is ridiculous, of course, to assume that Sinatra needs or wants a defence, but if ever there was an American to be honored rather than pillioried this, surely, is he.

Lock Up Guns? Impossible, Say Sellers

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald is asking the impossible when he asks gun merchants to lock up all guns overnight, spokesmen for local sporting goods shops said today.

"It's so easy tor people to say, lock your guns up," said sports shop owner Ben Hill.

"But it would require a special vault that would probably cost a couple of thousand dollars."

Not only that, putting the guns away every night would require an hour's work, plus another hour to take them out in the morning, Hill said.

Barry Beazley of Gordon's Sporting Goods said it would be impossible to lock up the more than 300 guns the store carries.

Macdonald Wednesday urged gun merchants to live up to the "necessities of modern society" by tightening security over firearms.

"If people want to get a gun, they'll get a gun," Hill said. Locked doors or locked cabinets won't stop them.

Doug Robinson of Robinson's sporting goods store said it would take a vault like the one in Fort Knox to store all his store's firearms each night.

However, virtually all the store's hand guns are kept in a steel vault, he said.

Neither Gordon's or Hill carry hand guns any more.

Robinson said a rash of break-ins in downtown stores has prompted his store to put a set of steel bars across its front window, as well as steel bars across the front door.

The back door has been steel-plated for 20 years, he said.

In contrast to the specialty stores, large department stores like Eaton's and the Bay said they always lock all gukns and ammunition away.

However, the Bay carries only about 25 guns, Eaton's between 10 and 15, spokesmen said. Neither carry handguns.

In his statement, Macdonald also urged the federal government to pass laws requiring registration of either all weapons or all gun owners.

Beazley said he thought present procedures are adequate.

Anyone buying a handgun must be registered and checked out by the police. Anyone buying a rifle or shotgun needs a firearms permit, which he can buy for $1 right at the store.

However, the store takes seriously the sale of guns, he said, and on four or five occasions have tipped police to suspicious characters who have bought guns.

Robinson said a registration law would be hopeless to enforce. The kind of person who would use a gun for illegal purposes isn't going to bother getting registered, he said.

He considers the crucial thing to be stricter enforcement of penalties for people who steal guns or use them illegally.

Besides, a registration law would require an enormous government bureaucracy, he said.

Hill said he thought registration of guns would be a useful measure, far more effective than the present $1 permit that anyone can afford.

Inquiry Asked On Water Board Work Practices

A union spokesman called Wednesday for a special inquiry into the work practices of the Greater Victoria Water District.

John Ranns, president of Local 598 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, said in an interview "we feel the public and us are being ripped off."

He also said recent layoffs of 29 men, including 12 this week, do not leave sufficient men — five foremen, five laborers and five equipment operators — to fix a major leak or break.

The layoff notices state the reason is no work and-or inclement weather.

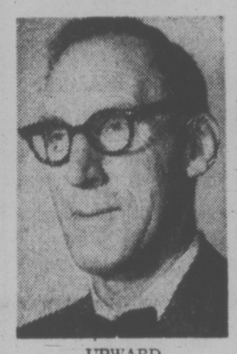
But Ranns said the layoffs are not justified and not necessary because there is work and the weather is better this winter than for several years.

In addition, he said, not all the layoffs are being done according to seniority. A grievance is pending, he added.

Ranns charged that two major projects, replacing a cast iron main to William Head and heavy construction on a major line runnig partway into the Saanich Peninsula, were started simultaneously last summer leading to an escalation of costs because of the necessity to use rented trucks and equipment.

The union, he said, has examples of "other bad work practices" which it wants investigated by an independent outside agency.

Water district commissioner Ron Upward replied that all these points were brought up at a private meeting of the water board.



UPWARD
. . . heard nothing

He said the water board would accept an outside investigation and had offered this on a shared-cost basis but had heard nothing from the union for six weeks.

"We hope we don't build water utilities that fall apart," he said. There was no need for a large repair crew because "you don't operate on the basis of having trouble."

He said, in response to criticism of the layoffs, that "the same people have been notified every winter for the last three to four years." But Ranns said the layoffs now involve people with five to seven years seniority who have come to expect continuity of employment.

Upward also said four senior men had to be laid off because the union's contract provides lay-off protection for four members of the negotiating committee, who were less senior. "But that's their business," he added.

The crux of the dispute, he said, is "are we operating a system for the chief benefit of the staff or the public?"

Relief on Way For Lone Lady

Rickman, a secretary who joined the previously all-male domain just before Christmas, has had to share with male colleagues the "very heavily used" washroom in the building, parks administrator Cliff Bate told aldermen tolay, "and the situation is both embarrassing and intolerable."

Bate requested and received approval to build a separate washroom at a cost of about $2,250. Estimates were prepared late last year but no funds were available.

★ ★ ★

In his report he said it's intended to employ more women on various aspects of park work, including the plant nursery, so the washroom will serve more than one person.

Commenting on the employment program, Bate said he noticed on a visit to England last year that women are extensively employed and prove highly efficient in parks work.

"Female bedding-out crews work in the parks," he said — and then hastily added "make that planting crews," as aldermen hooted with male chauvinist laughter.

Attack on Girl Brings 4-Year Term

An 18-year-old youth was sentenced to four years in prison today when he appeared in county court for sentencing on charges of criminal negligence causing bodily harm, indecent assault, and theft of an auto.

In handing the sentence to Richard Wayne Steele of 1040 Rockland, Judge J. C. Bowk warned of the "serious consequences" drinking drivers can expect to face if their actions result in the injury of another person.

Steele was charged Nov. 19 with attempting to run over another youth with a car the previous evening and to indecently assaulting a young girl two hours later.

Bowk noted Steele had a prior conviction for criminal negligence in Vancouver in April 1974 for which he received a $400 fine.

"Obviously he didn't learn any lesson then," he said.

The judge called Steele's "unprovoked assault" on a young girl walking on a city street and threats he was carrying a gun an "equally distressing action" which won no sympathy from the court.

"This kind of conduct and complete disregard for society cannot be tolerated," he said.

Referring to evidence read in the trial that Steele had been drinking heavily that evening, Bowk said "drunkenness does not excuse the crime."

He said it was fortunate no one was seriously injured or killed in the incidents.

Bowk sentenced Steele to four years on the indecent assault charge, noting the maximum penalty under the Criminal Code is five years.

On the criminal negligence charge he imposed a three-year term and, on the theft charge, six months.

The Code allows maximum penalties in each case of 10 years.

All sentences will run at the same time.

Steele had orignally been charged with attempted murder and rape but the former was reduced to criminal negligence causing bodily harm following a preliminary hearing before Judge William Ostler in Victoria provincial court Dec. 17.

The rape charge was reduced to indecent assault at the start of Steele's trial in county court this week. He pleaded guilty to all charges.

"The basic purpose of the Criminal Code is to protect society," Bowk said, adding he had taken into account a number of factors in sentencing, including the gravity of the offence, the deterrent effect and the maximum penalties allowed under the Code.

Smith said outside the court later he would "seriously consider appealing the case."

WOMAN DIES

Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre has called an inquest for 7 p.m. today at Sands' Mortuary here in the death of Mrs. Georgia Head of Galiano Island.

The 62-year-old pedestrian died Tuesday from head injuries received Saturday night when hit by a car as she crossed the Patricia Bay Highway near Beacon Avenue.

It was the fifth traffic fatality in the Greater Victoria area since the start of 1975.

Stop the Shouting, Pollen Tells Tourist Groups

Victoria's two tourist bureaus should stop shouting at each other and sit down and settle their problems quickly, Mayor Peter Pollen said Wednesday.

"It seems typical of Victoria that groups shout at each other at long range instead of engaging in mature discussion to settle problems."

The problems of the two tourist bureaus revolve around money — or the lack of it.

The Vancouver Island Publicity Bureau, under Sam Lane, gets government and private funds — and spends the money mainly on advertising Vancouver Island in other provinces and in the United States.

The Visitors Information Centre, under Terry Farmer, gets local municipal grants and private funds — and spends the money on services to tourists after they arrive.

Lane this week charged the local information centre was withholding funds that should go to the Vancouver Island bureau.

Farmer said it wasn't true.

The mayor said regardless of what is true or false, right or wrong, the two sides should sit down and talk out their troubles "in a mature and responsible manner."

Farmer said he was willing to talk if his directors approved but that did not mean his group necessarily would change its stance.

The main problem has been that both groups would have to conduct fund drives among local merchants to get revenue in the form of membership fees.

Lane argues it makes no sense to have two fund drives and is willing to leave the field clear to the local bureau but wants a cash grant from the bureau to make up the difference.

In this way both groups would receive cash but there would be only one fund drive.

However, Farmer replies that there is no way the local bureau can make direct grants to the senior body because the local bureau is not supposed to use its cash for external promotion of Victoria.

Farmer said the pledge was made to the four core municipalities when the new Visitors Information Centre was formed last March. All grants to the information centre are supposed to be used for services to tourists after they arrive.

"Maybe the municipalities want to change their mind, I don't know. But right now our hands are tied."

The only alternative, says Farmer, is for Lane's group to conduct its own campaign for funds in this area.

That would be an unnecessary duplication of effort and annoying to local merchants, according to Lane.

Lane points out that the local bureau used to make a $12,000 grant — but that was before the new regime.

The former Victoria Visitors Bureau went out of business in September, 1973, again in a dispute over funding. City council had donated $60,000 a year but insisted the bureau should raise funds itself as well. City funding was reduced and a fund drive launched but it fell short of its target.

The bureau folded.

In March, 1974, a new group of directors headed by Farmer launched the Victoria Information Centre. The four core municipalities promised to make moderate fund contributions provided the centre raised most of its cash itself and the money was not used for external promotion, which should be left to the Vancouver Island bureau.

Farmer said its membership drive has been very successful and as a result its request for civic funding will be reduced to under $15,000 this year from $19,000 in 1974 and far below the $60,000 the former bureau requested from city council.

The problems of the local bureau have been solved, he says, but concedes there remains the problem of local funding of the Vancouver Island bureau.

No Way A No-Show

DEAR ABBY: I have a beef that I wish you would put in your column together with some advice as to what I should do about it.

The Sunday after Thanksgiving, I went to the airport to get on a plane to take me back to New York, where I live. (I had visited my parents, who live in Nebraska.)

When I tried to check in I was told that my reservation had been cancelled! I never cancelled my reservation, and I told them so.

Then they informed me that their computer had informed them that since I was a "no show" on the flight from New York to Nebraska, I was automatically concelled on the return flight.

I tried to explain to the man behind the counter that I was NOT a "no show" because I was standing right there in front of him and I showed my ticket which indicated that I had indeed flown from New York to Omaha. He said he was sorry, but the computer showed me as a "no show"—and, Abby, if it had not been for another "no show," I wouldn't have been able to board that flight and get back to New York.

What should I have done?—A "No Show" That Showed

DEAR "NO SHOW": I'd have told the man behind the counter that since the computer insisted that I was a "no show," the airline should reimburse me for the ticket from New York to Omaha.

DEAR ABBY: I am still disturbed by your answer to "Appalled Mother," who was upset because so many strangers touched her baby. She was fearful that the child might be contaminated. You said, "Tell the strangers, 'Please don't touch.'"

Abby, don't you know that touching is one of the most important means of communicating among humans? In rational therapy we call it "stroking." One strokes another by giving him a compliment. Or by simply saying, "I like you." Touching is another way of stroking.

The mother who is appalled when people touch her child is conditioning that child to believe that touching and being touched is a no-no. And so another lonely human is made.

Many people in today's society have been conditioned not to touch each other, but when we want to comfort someone, the most natural thing to do is to put our arms around the sad one, or just hold him in our arms.

If we would only DO what we feel like doing at the moment there would be fewer lonely people. And isn't loneliness one of life's greatest tragedies?

I wish you had told "Appalled Mother" that touching is an important step away from loneliness. I read your column in the Beloit, Wisconsin News, and think you are one of the most rational people I don't know. But if we ever meet, you can count on a big hug!—Edward Veneman

DEAR EDWARD: And I'll probably hug you right back. Your sensible letter has "conditioned" me.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I will be celebrating our golden wedding anniversary in March, and our children and grandchildren are going to give us a big celebration, which we are very pleased about.

Now the question: We positively do not want anyone to go out and buy us a present—or even make a donation in our honor. All we want is for those invited to come and rejoice with us.

How should this be worded on the invitations? We don't want to offend anyone, but we want it understood that we are sincere when we ask them to please forget about presents and donations.

Thank you!—Mr. and Mrs. B.

DEAR B's: On the bottom of the invitation, add, "Positively no gifts, please!"

DEAR ABBY: The late John Barrymore, who was reputed to have been one of the world's greatest lovers, said "Sex is the thing that takes up the least amount of time, and causes the most amount of trouble."

The longer I read your column, Dear Abby, the more convinced am I that Barrymore was right. — Another Lover.

DEAR LOVER: If Barrymore really said that, he couldn't have been much of a lover.

Oldest Scout Group Marks 50 Milestone

The first meeting place of Greater Victoria's oldest scout group was a chicken house on Calumet Ave., Cliff Kirchin, a veteran scouter, recalls.

"The place was very undesirable," he said. "The only light was by candles and heat was out of the question."

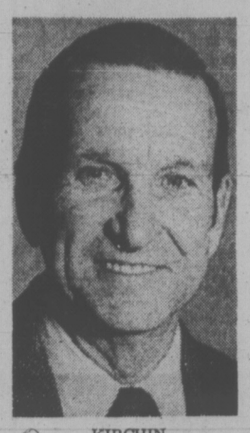
The First Douglas North Quadra Boy Scout Association, founded on Jan. 7, 1925, is celebrating its 50th anniversary this year.

A reunion will be held on Feb. 15 in Reynolds Senior Secondary School starting at 7:30 p.m. All present and former members, parents and friends of scouting are invited.

Kirchin is one of the group's oldest members. He served a total of 40 years, first in the original Wolf Cub Pack, as a King Scout, Rover, and leader for 30 years.

He holds the Canadian Wood Badge and the Long Service Medal.

He recalls the group had a difficult start.



KIRCHIN
. . . for 40 years

"They moved into the chicken house because they couldn't afford to pay rent for a house converted into a hall," he said.

"The rent was $8 a month," he added.

He relates things improved when a veterans' organization built in 1929 the first part of the present hall on Glasgow Avenue. Light was supplied by a gas lantern and the heat came from a tin heater.

The Cub pack, two Brownie packs, a Guide company and a Scout troop met there once a week.

The first group committee chairman was F. J. Crowhurst, a Saanich councillor for many years. The secretary was Robert Dunn, deputy minister of mines.

In 1931 the North Quadra Rover crew was organized by the late Jonty Slater.

The crew enlarged the hall and in 1935 organized the Tillicum Cub pack and Scout troop at St. Martin's-in-the-Fields on Obed Ave. For this service it received the Baden-Powell honor pennant in 1937.

In the Second World War, many members of the association joined the Canadian Armed Forces. Four died overseas.

WOMEN PACK PISTOLS AS NEVER BEFORE

DENVER (UPI) — Women packed pistols and scribbled rubber cheques as never before in Colorado during 1974 and authorities blamed women's liberation and a sagging economy.

"By telling girls they are just as good as boys and can do anything that a boy can do, some girls see that if their boyfriends rip off a car, they can, too," said Milt Hoffman of the Denver anti-crime council.

"Young girls are moving out of the parental home at earlier ages," he said. "They are not wanted at home, they are not wanted at school, so at least the police want them if they commit a crime."

Colorado Attorney-General John Moore said the increase in women's crimes came as no surprise. He said, "The growing independence of women manifests itself in many ways — one of which is crime.

Moore said the major increases in crimes by women were directly related to cash — such as fraud, forgery, theft and embezzlement.

"The women have children to feed and don't have public assistance anymore," said Moore. "Crime is a way to support their need."

Coloraodo public defender Rollie Rogers agreed the need to feed children caused women to turn criminal in increasing numbers.

He said the dissolution of homes left "more women with children. They (women) are breadwinners and when a need occurs they do the stealing."

However, Rogers said there was little change in the average number of violent crimes committed by women during 1974 — murder, manslaughter and assault.

"Women don't go around killing without good reason," he said. "In the cases where women are charged in assaults or homicides, 99 per cent of the time it is because their husband or sweetheart beat them up."

Crimes committed by women under 18 have taken a more dramatic swing upward in the state than have offences committed by older women. Authorities see drugs and women's liberation at the root.

Rogers said the hope for female juvenile offenders was in the fact that women were rarely repeat offenders — once in the "cooler" was enough. He said adult women also rarely took a second fall.

"Historically, women are more timid and the harrowing experience of being involved in the criminal justice system as a defendant makes a stronger impact on women than men," he said. "So, with women, punishment is more likely to be a deterrent to future crimes."

Presumably coffee was discovered during the ninth century. Since then its popularity has spread around the world. Canadians drink an average of two cups of coffee a day. This adds up to over 15 billion cups a year.

But not everywhere is coffee served in the way with which we are familiar. In Sumatra, for instance, it is a tea-like beverage which is brewed from the roasted leaves of the ocffee plant. In the Orient, coffee bans are ground very fine and a thick beverage is prepared which is drunk including the grounds.

The brief "History of Coffee" gives you some novel ideas on how to serve coffee. For example, to make one serving of 'Aztec Fire' mix 4 oz. of strong hot coffee with two ounces of red wine. After heating, pour the mixture into glasses. Add 1 oz. of Tequila (or a similar liquor), a dash of cocoa and sweeten.

With a little know-how, it is easy to make an excellent cup of coffee. To preserve its natural flavour and aroma, always store coffee in a cool, dry location. Use only fresh, cold water and after each use clean and rinse your coffee maker thoroughly.

Alvarez-Welch Medical Report

By DR. WALTER ALVAREZ

In an American Medical Association release I read at what age a small child should learn to do certain things. A young mother with her first-born child may be interested. Obviously, different children achieve certain skills at different ages.

There are certain mileposts along the way. For example, at one month, the child can lift his chin off the table. At two months, the healthy child can lift his chest off the table. At three months, the child reaches for objects but without success, and at four months, can sit without support. At five months, the child can sit on a lap and can grasp small objects, and at six months can sit in a high chair and grasp a dangling object.

The child at seven months can sit alone, and at eight can stand with help. By nine months, he can stand by holding on to a piece of furniture, and at 10 months can creep. A child of 11 months can walk if led by one hand and by 12 months can pull up and stand with the help of furniture. The child by 13 months can climb up a few stairs, and a month later can stand alone. By 15 months, the child can walk alone.

As Frank Chappell, the science news editor of the AMA says, parents should not be discouraged if their child is behind schedule, or overly sure that their child is precocious if he is ahead of schedule, because no two children are alike.

Years ago, when I was seeing many patients a day, I saw a number of individuals, often with a combination of great gifts and troublesome eccentricities. Sometimes an able man's wife would talk of leaving him, and when I would ask her, "What does he do that annoys you so much?" all she would say is, "Oh, he's just impossible."

Finally, when I succeeded in making friends with the man, winning his trust, and getting some information on his family history, I found that his father had occasionally to go to a mental hospital because of severe alcoholism, and perhaps his mother was "cracked on religion." Often I learned that my patient had a grandfather, father, and uncle all of whom had spent some time in a mental hospital.

In one group of cases, my patient's main trouble would be an occasional depression. In one such case I knew my patient well. At college he was very able, and later he became a distinguished judge. He had charm, but always some eccentricity, and on three occasions he was disabled by a depression. His father was very able and charming but somewhat eccentric. His grandmother was not very sensible and was not educated. Some of his uncles and an aunt were decidedly queer. His brother wound up senile and unpleasant and had to spend years in a nursing home.

What interested me what most of my "relatives of the psychotic" patients was that usually psychiatrists did not seem to have a good scientific diagnosis for that. A few were probably people described by my dear friend Dr. Herbert Cleckley in his great book, "The Mask of Sanity." Many were said by their relatives and friends to be "half cracked," "a bit screwy," and a bit "tetched," or "without all their marbles."

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Fri., Jan. 24

By SYDNEY OMARR

Leo can be magnanimous about "big things" but petty about details. Leo can make the grand gesture and whine about small matters. The native is stubborn, spoiled, romantic, creative and generous. Leo is a Fire sign, susceptible to flattery and "burns up" when unfairly criticized. Here is the Sun, star bright, shiny and attractive enough to attract followers, often in lieu of friends. Yes, Leo can be an enigma. What do you do about your Leo?

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You get plenty of sweet talk, but not much action. You cannot seem to get a handle on specifics. Know it and ride with the tide. Leave details for another time. Grasp picture as a whole. Relatives are busy sniping at each other. Maintain sense of humor.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Friend supports your position — and could put up money. Aquarius, Leo and Scorpio might be involved. Accent is on expenditures, consolidation of assets, interest rates and basic investments. You are due to end logjam.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Lunar cycle is such that an agreement wins approval of one in position of authority. You get chance now to effectively express views. Your personality sparkles — you are complimented and perhaps you may even be up for a promotion.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your desire to knit family ties is accented. You are able to communicate, to get message across, to bridge gaps created by distance. What was a misunderstanding is resolved. Be willing to forgive and forget. Taurus, Libra could be involved.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Look within for answers. Find motives. Discern what it is you actually desire. Avoid self-deception. Some of your hopes are due for revision. Stop brooding about "what might have been." The future beckons — in promising manner. Respond!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You get "breaks." Puzzle pieces fall into place. Emphasis is on organization, priorities, achievement. Older individual pays meaningful — and profitable — compliment. You get a better agreement than anticipated.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Finish rather than initiate project. Look beyond the immediate. Language barrier can be overcome. Catch up on writing, calls, correspondence. Aries and another Libran could be in picture. You discover what might be regarded as a "missing link."

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You discover costs — and in more ways than one. You live and learn. Your creative juices flow. You impress and display originality. Leo and Aquarius play roles. One who seemed indifferent proves otherwise — by actions.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Slow pace should not be used as an excuse to be discouraged. Realize you are building on a solid base. Strive to bring alive your intuitive intellect. Perceive that delay is not necessarily akin to defeat.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Light touch is best for now — don't force issues. Humor and charm can win your way. Accent is on getting together with those who share health, employment interests. Social event could lead to meaningful relationship.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Avoid paying too much for too little—message will be clarified. Check details—be aware of subtle nuances. Member of opposite sex is trying to tell you something. Leo, Taurus and Scorpio could be in picture.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You recover from setback and take initiative. Basic change occurs and you see clearly — Gemini, Virgo could be involved. One who pulls strings of authority is trying to smooth your path. That's good!

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you have unusual voice; you started something in 1974—and this year it could bear fruit. Your most significant month this year is indicated as June. If single, you may marry—sooner than anticipated. Taurus, Libra persons play important roles in your life. You are artistic, temperamental and romantic.

"Diamonds are a girl's best friend!"

If the song from which that line is taken had been popular back in 1912, I'm certain Alicia Sandy would have been singing it. For in that year a pair of diamond earrings she had never seen, turned up as "lucky pieces" when she was lonely and dejected.

Two years before that, with her husband William and three small sons, George, Rupert and Raymond, she had left a sheltered life in England (which she now compares with the era of the popular television series Upstairs-Downstairs) to make a new home in Victoria.

"Looking back I think my husband was lured by the extravagant promises appearing in English papers of easy wealth to be found in the new world," she says.

However, those promises soon turned out to be myths. Prosperity ignored the little family, and life was grim that morning in 1912 when the young mother took her little boys to a Dallas Road beach, near where they were living in a small, cramped cottage.

While they were on the beach a woman came along and stopped to talk. Turned out she was also from England, by way of Winnipeg, and that she made frequent visits to Victoria.

Reminiscing today in her charming home on Paddon Street, Mrs. Sandy says "she must have seen the forlorn look on my face and the suspicion of tears in my eyes, for she was soon asking questions . . . and I was pouring out my troubles."

The stranger's name was Dolly Harrison, and almost immediately she made a suggestion — open an English style tearoom.

There was no money for such a venture was Mrs. Sandy's reply.

Mrs. Harrison thought a moment, then said she would sell a pair of diamond earrings she had in a safety deposit box and that she never wore, and give the money to Mrs. Sandy if she would start that tearoom.

The earrings brought $150 and with the money the two women — who became lifelong friends — started looking for a suitable location. They found it on the upper floor of a building near the southwest corner of Fort and Douglas Streets.

"It was a series of rooms, more like a large apartment," Alicia Sandy remembers.

Dolly Harrison then introduced Mrs. Sandy to Oscar Bass, well-known lawyer of that day, who handled the business end of the deal, and to Will and Dave Spencer who gave her credit in their store for furnishings. She also sponsored a loan from her bank to assist with renovations.

When all was ready, the Zetland tearooms, destined to become the most popular rendezvous in Victoria, opened its doors.

"I didn't know how to cook. I had never cut a sandwich, never washed dishes. But I armed myself with a good cookbook and single-handed went to work."

Each day the tearoom opened at noon and stayed open into the early evening. Then Mrs. Sandy started cleaning up "which often took until midnight."

Mrs. Harrison had many friends and she brought them regularly to the Zetland. Guests from the Empress Hotel found and liked the place. Visitors came from faraway places and wrote letters of thanks after they returned home.

Hon. Archer Martin, a top ranking member of the legal profession, pre-empted a table and ate his noonday meal there for over 12 years. "He had his own teapot, his own cup and saucer and he never varied from the 35 cent luncheon in all that time."

As fame of the tearoom spread there were times during summer seasons when Mrs. Sandy had to lock the doors. "We could only seat 50 at a time," she says, "so we kept the doors shut until we had things washed up and everything neat and tidy again."

By then the boys were old enough to come in after school to help "and they did that willingly and with a smile."

There was also a young woman named Marian Crooks (now Brown) who worked part-time. "She taught me a lot about cooking and we have remained friends throughout the years."

Zetland menus, by present standards were bountiful and reasonable. A hot meal "soup, joint, vegetable and a sweet with roll and tea," cost only 50 cents.

When Mrs. Sandy decided to put it up to 60 cents people complained . . . but she dit it anyway and they continued to come to the tearoom.

She made her own jams and jellies and even a beer which she remembers as "a kind of light ale."

During a short period the tearoom had competition "across on the northeast corner of Fort and Douglas where the Marks and Spencer store is now located."

At that time there was a log building "much like a miner's cabin" there and it was taken by a former London Gaity Theatre actress who opened an eating place and named it The Gaity.

"She was glamorous," Mrs. Sandy remembers," and she not only served tea but had a room upstairs where gentlemen could gather for a drink."

However, the place soon closed. The actress went off to San Francisco and later, committed suicide there.

During the First World War, when there was a military camp at the Willows, soldiers came up the Zetland stairs for snacks and stayed to wash the dishes afterward.

"That's when I decided to remain open at night until 11 o'clock, to give them some place that was a little like home."

A popular feature of the tearooms was a fortune teller. "I met Mrs. Parker in a private home and found her so amazing I invited her to come and read in the Zetland," Mrs. Sandy remembers.

"She proved a wonderful drawing card and while she was with me, many people came for tea just to have their fortunes told."

Alicia Sandy kept the Zetland doors open through the depression of the 30s and the Second World War. Then, in 1945, she decided to retire.

Today, it's her proud boast that when she closed the doors for a last time, she wasn't in debt to anyone.

People told her "right from the beginning" that she would never make money in the venture — and — she says, she never did.

"However, I paid my bills and there was always something left over. What is even more precious to me now, the Zetland gave me a host of friends."

Metrics Coming to Kitchen —All 'Beautifully Simple'

You'll notice it first in the supermarket, where one day you'll find yourself putting a litre or two of milk in your shopping cart.

Anything now purchased by the pound, such as butter, sugar and coffee, will come in 500 gram or ½ kilo packages, which will be slightly larger than the old pound packages. Other sizes will also be available, giving a variety of choice.

At the butcher counter you may select a roast weighing three or four kilograms, and you may drop a 1000 gram package of flour into your cart in case you're planning to do some baking.

Of course if the temperature is up around 40 degrees Celsius you'd do better to forget about using the oven and turn your hand instead to some home-made ice cream, mixed with loving care and frozen at 0 degrees Celsius. Two litres ought to be about right for the average family.

From the supermarket, it's just a short hop to the kitchen where you'll be using the new measurements in your daily cooking.

Recipes will measure ingredients in metrics, by the gram or the litre in most cases. Your standard measuring cup will probably be 250 millilitres in capacity, holding up to 250 grams of liquid, just a trifle more than your old cup which held 237 millilitres.

One teaspoon as now measured will become 5 centilitres. A tablespoon will be 15 centilitres. Dry ingredients will be weighed by the gram or the litre, and you will have fractions such as ½ to ¼ to describe amounts with precisions. See metric table attached).

"It's all beautifully simple once you get the the knack of it," said Temple University's Dr. Ann M. Wilderman, who teaches metrics as a part of eacher education courses in mathematics.

"For instance, under the old system ounces are used to measure both liquid volume and weight. But does a fluid ounce weigh an ounce on the scales? Not at all . . . there's no functional relationship between the two units.

"And what about a quart? If you're talking about a liquid, you mean one fourth of a gallon. But on the other hand if you're talking about dry measure, you have one eighth of a peck. No relationship whatever," she said. "Confusing, isn't it?

"With metrics, all this is a thing of the past. The decimal base and the logical relationship among metric units makes conversion tables unnecessary.

"I expect that some people may hesitate when they see the new metric packages on the shelves in their supermarkets," she continued, "because it's instinctive to be cautious about making changes.

"But take my advice before you get upset about metrics. Try it . . . you'll like it!"

To prove her point, Dr. Wilderman has passed on four recipes given to her by her friend, Mrs. Kristine Kalb, a five-year Philadelphia resident who was born in Uppsala, Sweden. The two women met when Dr. Wilderman went to St. Peter's Day School, 319 Lombard St., Philadelphia, to work with the teachers on a mathematics curriculum. Later, Mrs. Kalb enrolled in Dr. Wilderman's "how-to-teach-metrics" course this summer, in order that she might accustom her own pupils to the metric system as efficiently as possible.

Sweden has been using metrics for years, and Mrs. Kalb, an expert Swedish cook, had brought with her dozens of mouth-watering Swedish recipes, all in metrics. These are some of her favorites which she gave to Dr. Wilderman.

SWEDISH MEATBALLS

Ingredients:

2 hg. ground pork
3 hg. ground beef
(mix these thoroughly)
60 cl. breadcrumbs
1½ dl. water
2½ cl. salt
2½ cl. Jamaica allspice
1 egg
1 onion, chopped fine
½ dl. cream

Mix bread crumbs and water. Let sit 3 or 4 minutes. Add salt, spice and egg. Brown onions in frying pan. Add to mixture. Add ground meat and cream. Mix thoroughly, and shape into meatballs, 2 cm in diameter.

Fry in pan. When browned, put into pot, add a little water and simmer for 10 minutes. Serve with potatoes.

TABLE OF EQUIVALENTS, WEIGHT AND CAPACITY, FOR USE IN THE KITCHEN

Present	Metric Equivalent
1 cupful liquid (cpfl)	0.2366 litre
1 pint liquid (pt)	0.4732 litre
1 quart liquid (qt)	0.9463 litre
1 teaspoonful (tsp)	5 centilitres
1 tablespoonful (tbsp)	15 centilitres
1 pound (lb)	453.59 grams

Note: measurement of temperatures: On the Fahrenheit scale now in use, the boiling point of water is 212 degrees above zero. Freezing point is 32 degrees. In the metric system temperature is measured on the Celsius scale in which water freezes at 0 degrees and boils at 100 degrees. Normal body temperature on the Celsius scale is 37 degrees.

Metric abbreviations you'll be learning:
Litre—L (a litre—1.057 qt.).
Kilogram—kg (a kilogram—2.2046 pounds).
Hectogram—hg (a hectogram—3.527 pounds).

MEN'S FASHIONS GIVEN BOOST

By BERNADINE MORRIS

NEW YORK (NYT) — As Halston parties go, it was a fairly staid affair. Even Andy Word wore a tie. With a couple of exceptions — Angelo Donghia, the interior designer, wore a white scarf around his neck, Douglas Auchincloss wore a black turtle-neck — so did most everybody else.

Some 600 people, mostly representatives of stores such as Bergdorf Goodman, Bloomingdale's and Sakowitz of Houston, sat quietly sipping drinks at tables flanking the long runway set up in the centre of the promenade at the New York State Theatre in Lincoln Centre the other day. Men;'s fashions received their biggest boost since the Edwardian explosion of the early 1960's.

It was Halston's first major foray into the men's fashion business. When he first started his women's company some seven years ago, he would occasionally do a sweater or a leather jacket or a pair of pants for men, but it never amounted to much.

"Men's clothing is a big business here in the United States," he explained before the show. "It has to be handled in a big way."

Now part of Norton Simon, the giant conglomerate, he had the backing to go into it in a big way. He has, with the the men's wear business, simply provided clothes for men to wear to business, football games and parties at night. The colors and fabrics are all related, so that a man could start with a sport shirt and end up with an entire wardrobe, every piece of which worked with everything else.

It's the separates theory which has gone so far in women's clothes:. applied to men's designs — all by the same maker. A sports shirt can double as a jacket over a turtle-neck sweater. A blazer can be worn to a ballgame — or a dinner party when the women are in long dresses.

The message is very low keyed, tasteful. Nothing that's going to knock your eye out, or upset a bank president.

"I don't like high style," said Halston, determined to bring the same classic, stripped-down sort of designing to men as he did for women. "I want the clothes to be good looking and natural — I don't want them to be showy."

Workers Laid Off

SYDNEY (AP) — About 300,000 Australians were laid off for one day without pay Tuesday and millions of others suffered temporary electrical blackouts because of a strike by 65 power station repairmen that started Jan. 8.

JELLY SIDE DOWN
nancy stahl

As my children grow older, I find that I see less and less of them. Oh, I'm certain that I'd know them right off should I bump into them on the street: I mean, I could hardly miss a tall blonde girl wearing my clothes, could I? Or a short blonde boy with size 10 shoes and a terminal case of Ring Around the Collar?

Besides, isn't this solitude what I hoped for 12 years ago when they insisted on accompanying me whenever I went to the bathroom?

Actually, while I enjoyed it semi-immensely at the time, for the most part I am quite content to relinquish my title of North American Old Maid Champion.

What I do miss is eating Saturday lunch together.

As Saturday is the only lunchtime we share, I tend to prepare a lavish spread, including bisque of shrimp soup, open-face chicken and bacon sandwiches, and broiled corried fomatoes. I envision the children rushing in any minute, expressing their delight at the prospect of such culinary magic, perhaps even calling me "Marmee." Instead, I receive phone calls from distant shopping plazas informing me that one child is going to the dentist with Joey to see him get his fluoride treatment, and the other is busy in a pet shop watching a hamster give birth.

I find that it helps at this time to remember the North Atlantic salmon, who never eat together. Of course, a nagging voice persists in reminding me that my children aren't salmon. But, after alk I have to think about something on these occasions, and North Atlantic salmon are better than nothing.

Sobbing and kicking the stove does absolutely no good at all.

"Wow I'm glad I'm alive 'cause I want to wiggle my bones and swing and wiggle my toes in the sand. I'm glad I'm alive or I'd have no one to love me."

This may not be a poem of Shakespearian sophistication, or one destined to make a hard-nosed publisher melt, but written by eight-year-old Jasmine Figueiredo of Vancouver, it's getting nation-wide exposure.

She is one of those who wrote, painted a picture or sent a photograph along to All About Us-Nous Autres, an organization that collects, publishes and exhibits creative works by Canadians from six to 18 years of age.

The group is planning its third annual art exhibit and a second volume of writings.

Young would-be artists interested in taking part this year should have entries in by May 1. They should also give their name, age and address. The address is: Betty Nickerson, Co-ordinator; Box 1985, Station B, Ottawa, Ontario, KIP 5R5.

Stupich Threatens Food Council

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich said Wednesday he is disappointed in the work of the B.C. Food Council and if it does not improve the group may be disbanded.

The various consumer and producer group representatives on the council work in a spirit of confrontation rather than co-operation, said Stupich, and they refuse to recognize each other's problems.

When the new provincial marketing board is set up, the food council may have a new role to play in setting up studies and projects, said Stupich, and they will hopefully work better together.

"If they're not working after the provincial marketing board is set up I think I can find better uses for their funds somewhere else in the department," he added.

The 10 members of the council work on a volunteer basis and have a $25,000 a year budget for expenses.

Set up in 1953, the council has representatives from the Consumers Association of Canada as well as retailers, producers, wholesalers and labor representatives.

The group originally conducted studies and projects assigned by the minister of agriculture but since the NDP came to office they have been left on their own to decide on their own projects on any phase of B.C.'s food industry.

Stupich said the council has recently looked into the beef industry, the egg industry and processing plants but once they come to analyse the results of their studies they run into philosophical disagreements.

Two CAC members of the council recently complained publicly about the group, saying it is doing nothing to help consumers because it is dominated by producers.

They called for the removal of associate deputy of agriculture E. M. King as chairman of the council because, they said, he favors producers and farmers.

Stupich said he is willing to replace King if that will help the council progress.

The CAC members said they have been unable to convince the other members of the council to conduct an investigation of marketing boards or to allow a more open board with more input from consumers.

CONTRACT for the longest ship ever built at the Yarrows Ltd. shipyard has brought excavation and demolition in its wake. In order to extend the crane tracks, seen in picture, a large hole had to be dug and one end of the yard's store building knocked down. Parts for the ship, a 457-foot B.C. ferry are also seen. Work on the $12,830,000 vessel began in October and she is expected to be completed in the spring of 1976. She will have a capacity for 378 passenger vehicles. (Bill Halkett photo)

Gas Rationing Plan Gets Howls in U.K.

LONDON (AP) — Motoring organizations set up a howl of protest Wednesday on learning the Labor government may introduce gasoline rationing to help save on Britain's oil-import bill. Britain, which imports all its oil, had a trade deficit last year of $8.63 billion.

The scheme would be based on a two-tier price system. Press reports say each motorist would get 10 gallons a month at $1.15 a gallon and unlimited supplies at $2.76 a gallon, making British gas the highest-priced in the world. The current price here is about $1.70 a gallon for top-grade gasoline.

"We don't think it would work," said the Automobile Association, pointing to administrative problems and the possibility of a black market.

The doubt was echoed by the Royal Automobile Club where a spokesman said: "It would cost a great deal of money to administer the scheme, it would encourage black-market activities and it would increase the cost of living."

The Petroleum Retailers Association said the plan "would create very considerable confusion both to the retailer and to the public, and the trade could not accept the extra cost involved."

Details of the scheme were leaked to the British press, apparently to test public reaction.

Energy Secretary Eric Varley issued a statement saying the two-tier pricing system is only one of a number of energy-saving measures under consideration.

"No decisions have been taken, and any figures for the basic allocation and the different levels and prices are therefore speculative," Varley said. Patrick Jenkin, energy spokesman for the opposition Conservative party, said the Tories would support the scheme in principle.

He said a black market could be avoided by making the ration coupons freely changeable so that motorists could buy or sell them on "a white market." This also would cut administrative costs, he said.

The Royal Automobile Club said rationing would increase costs "both directly to the motorist" and indirectly through businesses of all kinds who would be forced to increase charges."

Jenkin also said he doubted if worthwhile savings would be made, pointing out that private motoring accounts for only seven per cent of the oil used in Britain.

Student-Teacher Ratio Still Falling: Dailly

The ratio now stands at 19.82 compared to 21.56 in 1973 and 22.68 in 1972.

But the figures only represent the ratio of full-time students to full-time professional staff and do not relate to the actual sizes of classes in B.C.

Last year Dailly granted school districts an additional $21 million in grants to assist in lowering the ratio and said the object of the grants was to continue lowering the ratio by 1.5 for three years to bring it down to 17-to-1.

Dailly said earlier this month, however, she cannot say yet whether more additional grants will be available this year to continue the reduction program.

During the past two years the number of students in B.C. has increased by 1.8 per cent while the number of teachers increased by 16.4 per cent.

In Greater Victoria, the ratio of students to teachers now stands at 19.27-to-1 while Sooke School District has a 19.35 ratio and Saanich a 19.22 ratio.

The lowest pupil-teacher ratios were in Stikine (16.22), Vancouver Island West (15.57) and Queen Charlotte Islands (16.81) while the largest were in Summerland (21.51), Southern Okanagan, (21.45) and Vancouver (21.12).

Four Shot, Killed In Grocery Store

BLUFFTON, Ga. (UPI) — Four men were lined up and shot to death with a high-powered rifle at a rural grocery-gas station Wednesday in South Georgia. A suspect, covered with blood, was arrested nearby.

A man answering the telephone at Mansfield Grocery, where the killings occurred, said only, "there's been a horrendous shooting here," and hung up.

"We've got some leads and one firm suspect at this time," said agent Buck Bentley of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation.

Officers arrested a man whose car had run into a ditch several hundred yards from the store. The suspect said he had heard shots while driving by the store and tried to turn around to investigate. Officers said he had blood on his pants and 30-caliber ammunition was found in the car.

Deputies cordoned off the yellow brick building and refused to let anyone into the structure beside U.S. 27, a two-lane highway from Atlanta to the fishing and vacation resorts of the Florida Panhandle.

The victims apparently were all employees of the store, which recently opened under new management after being operated for years as the family-owned Mansfield grocery.

Hostage Escapes

SOUTH BEND, Indiana (Reuter) — A 17-year-old girl taken hostage by two heavily-armed gunmen Tuesday night escaped apparently unharmed early today just three blocks from police headquarters here.

Loucindy Sherman was found by detectives at an intersection at 2:45 a.m. after police had received a telephone call as to her whereabouts.

She was taken to police headquarters for questioning.

Earlier, authorities had identified one of her abductors as David Roy Winters, 23. He was named in a federal kidnapping warrant. The second man was not named in the warrant because positive identity was not established, police said.

The gunmen still were at large. They had dropped from sight after criss-crossing northern Indiana in an apparently stolen car.

The girl was one of four persons taken hostage by two gunmen who fled a downtown department store Tuesday night after police interrupted a holdup. The other three, including two police officers and the wife of the store owner, were freed earlier Wednesday.

Miss Sherman, a high school student, was a part-time worker in the store.

TWO MEN HUNTED

Nothing was taken when the owner of Bolsters Chevron Service chased two men in their early twenties from the premises after a break-in at about 7:27 p.m.

A short time later the home of Mrs. Dorothy Bickford at 7011 West Saanich Road was ransacked and her car stolen. Mrs. Bickford was on vacation in Hawaii.

Lottery Boost to Save Games

QUEBEC (CP)—The financing of the 1976 Summer Olympics became virtually assured late Wednesday night when Premier Robert Bourassa said it is "almost certain" there will be an extension of the Olympic lottery to cover a $200-300 million deficit.

The premier told a committee of the national assembly the extension, for an unspecified number of years, would apply only in Quebec province.

Lottery revenues from outside the province cannot be used for construction costs. The revenues are for administrative costs of the Olympic organizing committee COJO.

COJO said Tuesday lottery revenue is expected to reach $200 million. It originally was estimated at $32 million.

Montreal Mayor Jean Drapeau said Wednesday the estimated increase in revenue makes a strict interpretation of the original agreement with other provinces unrealistic.

It would be absurd, the mayor said, if COJO finished with a $200 million surplus in lottery revenue and Montreal ran up a deficit on construction costs.

QUESTION OF HONOR

But Finance Minister Raymond Garneau said he would not tolerate any violation of the promise he made to the other provinces. "It is a question of honor."

However, Mr. Garneau said revenue generated by the lottery in Quebec was not part of any such agreement and could be applied to any part of the Olympic budget.

With 50 per cent of lottery revenues estimated to be coming from Quebec, that would mean $100 million could be used to help meet construction costs. Mayor Drapeau said Wednesday the total cost of the Olympics would be $600 million.

There will be no deficit, he said. "All I want is the lottery tap to flow until the bathtub is filled."

CITY COULD BORROW

Premier Bourassa suggested the city could borrow money against revenue that will come from leasing the stadium and other facilities after the Games are finished.

Focus of much attention at committee hearings, called to study ways of cutting Olympic costs, is the 70,000-seat main stadium with an adjoining 600-foot tower housing the swimming pool and anchoring a retractable roof.

While COJO estimated last month that the stadium facility would cost $380 million, Major Drapeau said he expects it to cost only $320 million.

Questioned by committee members on the possibility of eliminating some parts of the structure to reduce costs—specifically the tower—Mayor Drapeau said: "As soon as you take out a piece, the other pieces don't fit. The whole complex must be replaced if one part is replaced."

The committee will consider again Tuesday COJO's suggestion that the Autostade —the stadium built for Expo '67—be moved to the Olympic site as a way of meeting deadlines and cutting costs.

The hearings continue.

THINGS SURE CAN BE TOUGH when the big steel bars are keeping you away from the wide open spaces. This kitty seems a bit upset with its confinement at the Vancouver SPCA — or maybe the vacancy rate in the city. There just doesn't seem to be much available in the newspaper want ads.

Mob Seeking Que. Killers

MONTREAL (CP) — The city's underworld is looking for the killers of the 13 people who died in a mass slaying at a bar earlier this week, according to one police source.

"It is no secret the mob wants to find the guys to blame," the detective said Wednesday night.

"I'm pretty sure the mob knows who is responsible for the killings and wants to get rid of them to ease the pressure of our investigation."

Two of the club victims had been shot; the others died of asphyxiation.

Police also said Wednesday that Rejean Falin, manager of the club, who died from a bullet wound in the back, was a former member of the Montreal police department who resigned "for personal reasons".

The other shot man Pierre Lamarche was described as a detective for a downtown department store.

In addition, club owner Joseph Beaudry said two of the victims were an RCMP agent and his companion. An RCMP spokesman denied the claim.

One investigator said police now believe the mass slaying was the work of two killers.

PSC DISPUTE TALK DELAYED

A public meeting Friday to discuss the current pay dispute involving the trades and labor group of the Public Service Alliance of Canada has been postponed, regional representative Tom Dalzell said Wednesday.

CRAMPED LOTS HIT

Lots in a massive 600-acre subdivision planned for North Saanich are too small, residents of the Dean Park area told a public meeting Wednesday.

Residents of the area around the subdivision told council Wednesday they had moved to the area because of a desire for living space and complained that the third-acre lots would be too small.

The first phase of the project calls for 113 houses to be built, but North Saanich Mayor Paul Grieve said no final approval will be given until a study of water availability in the area is completed.

GEORGE M.

Dancing Sparkles But Acting Fizzles

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

Super energy and sparkling choreography are the lasting impressions one carries away from the UBC Musical Theatre Society production of George M!

The musical biography of the Yankee Irish vaudeville hoofer and songwriter who came to be known as "the man who owned Broadway" opened at McPherson Playhouse Wednesday and will be seen there for the rest of the week.

The production owes a great debt to choreographer Grace Macdonald and the dancing skill of the cast. The choreographer's art and musical stage experience were at work, fortunately, throughout, giving shape, interest and a gloss of professionalism to the show.

Where the script calls for straight acting—and there are a number of dramatic scenes —the results are mediocre to poor.

Best touches in this area come from Bill Houghton as George M. himself, Marilyn Smith as the second Mrs. Cohan, and Nathan Divinsky as the producer, Sam Harris.

Houghton is a very good dancer and a reasonable singer and he conveyed the brash conceit of the young Cohan as well as the bitteness and disillusionment of the aging performer effectively (although without any help from the makeup department).

The big-sounding but unpolished brass of the orchestra—it contains a dandy piccolo and piano—helped the chorus belt out all the come-again tunes: So Long Mary, Give My Regards to Broadway, Mary's a Grand Old Name, Over There and of course, Yankee Doodle Dandy.

It also, together with an inefficient system of mikes, obliterated most snug words.

Among things that didn't work too well were the over-under scenes—the several occasions when two separate actions were running parallel. the result was confusing.

But most of the audience would readily forgive such technical inadequacies, given the nostalgia, the non-stop pace, the vitality of the show as a whole.

Settings are first-rate and handled, whether flown or rolled onstage, with professional adroitness.

Craig Wood, Sylvia Granda, and Colleen Winton as Cohan's family, to whom he was so intensely loyal, do a fair job of convincing us as to their identities and Shirley Scratchley as star Fay Templeton provides an attractive moment of song.

Official Seal On Old Treaty

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Ford Wednesday put the official seal of approval on a treaty the U.S. proposed and fought for nearly 50 years ago and then declined to ratify.

Long approved by more than 100 other nations, the treaty prohibits use of poisonous and other gases in warfare.

At a White House ceremony attended by leading members of Congress, Ford also signed a convention ratified last month which would ban development, production and stockpiling of biological and toxic weapons.

The convention goes into effect when the United States, the Soviet Union and Britain formally ratify and sign the documents.

Thirty-seven nations, including Britain, have already done so, and the Soviet Union has announced its intention to ratify soon.

Referring to the ban on bacteriological weapons, Ford said "This is the first such agreement since the Second World War to provide for actual elimination of an entire class of weapons."

The U.S. has already unilaterally renounced use of the weapons and "our entire stockpile of biological and toxic agents and weapons has been destroyed," he said.

PIPELINE 'NATIONAL PRIORITY'

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian Arctic Gas Pipeline Ltd. said today the $7.8-billion natural gas pipeline it wants to construct from the Mackenzie Delta must be considered "a national priority."

In a final set of submissions to the National Energy Board for a permit to build the pipeline, the 23-member consortium said Canada's economic welfare is endangered if construction does not begin as soon as possible.

The submissions dealing with supply, distribution and the pipeline's economic consequences, repeatedly stressed the urgency of developing northern reserves to overcome energy shortages anticipated in two years time.

"It is clear the security of domestic energy supply is already threatened and that District Teachers Association gas reserves must be considered as more than simply an activity in the national interest. It should be considered a national priority."

DIFFERENCE IN A DAY

The law caught up with a Victoria motorist Wednesday after a sharp-eyed clerk noticed two traffic tickets tendered for payment last month had altered dates.

Gordon Leeson, 1225 Johnson, pleaded guilty in Victoria provincial court to two charges of parking in a no-parking zone in the 1200-block Langley Dec. 7, but gave no explanation to Judge Fred Green of just how the dates were changed or who had done it.

He admitted his wife had paid the tickets Dec. 12, and agreed the dates had been changed to read Dec. 9 instead of Dec. 7.

The clerk accepted payment of $2 for each ticket as they had apparently been tendered within the 72-hour period. Otherwise the penalty would have been $5 a ticket.

He called it a forgery and intimated the crown could have proceeded under that charge but didn't.

"I am concerned about this sort of thing and want to nip it in the bud," he said urging the maximum penalty allowed for under the bylaw — $25.

Green asked Leeson for some explanation but receiving none turned towards him and said, "Are you willing to agree it wasn't done with any great thought?"

"Yes," Leeson replied.

Green fined him $25 on the first charge, but only $5 on the second.

"I don't wish to bludgeon you any further . . . I think the point has been made," he said.

Frozen Feet Don't Deter Happy Jogger

WINNIPEG — Ken Weldrick, of Vancouver, part-way through a planned four-month jogging trip across Canada, has found out the hard way about the hazards of the Prairie winter. The 23-year-old jogger was snoozing outdoors near Moosomin, by the Manitoba-Saskatchewan border, when the worst blizzard in several years struck 12 days ago.

"I usually sleep on the side of the highway in my sleeping bag," said Weldrick. "When I woke up, I was covered in snow and my feet were frozen."

The frostbite, which also hit his ears and nose, slowed him up temporarily but hasn't deterred him from his target of reaching St. John's, Nfld., by April 1.

"Some people may think I'm crazy and sometimes I think they are right," said Weldrick, who reached Winnipeg Wednesday. "But I'm not giving up."

NORRISTOWN, Pa. — When a local bank president learned that many of his customers could not repay loans because they were unemployed, he decided to do something about it. He got them jobs.

John Carr, president of Suburban Bank, recently called a meeting of his consumer loan department staff to discuss the bank's delinquent loan customers.

"We're in the money-making business," he told them. "But it doesn't do much good to harass a customer for payment if the poor guy isn't working.

"You might even find them jobs," he said and left it at that.

The next day Carr discussed the problem over lunch with Edward Meister, president of Transicoil Inc., of nearby Worcester. Meister said he had openings on his night shift. That same night Norreen Lawless, manager of the loan department, called delinquent loan consumers and found 87 were unemployed. She contacted local merchants and within three days placed 22 bank customers in new jobs.

"So far nobody has rejected our offer," Lawless said.

WASHINGTON — Richard Nixon's legal defence fund, almost broke after paying another $20,000 in lawyers' fees, is appealing to foreign contributors for help in raising $1 million to aid the former United States president.

Rabbi Baruch Korff, head of the President Nixon Justice Fund, handed the $20,000 cheque Wednesday to a secretary for the Washington law firm representing Nixon in a range of legal entanglements.

It brought to $100,000 the legal fees paid by the fund since Nixon resigned Aug. 9, Korff said.

LAS VEGAS — A jury here has found a 26-year-old Canadian guilty of first-degree murder in the knife-torture slaying of a San Jose, Calif., couple. The verdict against Lloyd Paulette of Edmonton was returned Wednesday. The jury also recommended that Paulette serve a life sentence in the Nevada state prison without possibility of parole. District Judge Joseph Pavlikowski scheduled formal sentencing for Feb. 23.

TORONTO — Farley Mowat says he has lost about $50,000 in royalties because the Coles bookstore chain has imported United States editions of three of his books and is selling them at cut-rate prices. Pierre Berton, another Canadian author, estimates his royalty losses at $5,000 for the same reason.

FOOD GIVEAWAY

TORONTO — About 1,200 people showed up at the Regent Park housing development parking lot Wednesday as the Salvation Army distributed 10 tons of silver hake, a cod-like whitefish donated by a local fish wholesaler.

The breaded, portioned fish was purchased a year ago by D. McIntyre fish wholesalers, who expected to sell it to institutional customers. They bought 20 tons at about 50 cents a pound.

However, the portions were uneven and the fish wouldn't sell, so the wholesaler gave the hake to the Salvation Army.

The Salvation army distributed three tons to its institutions, then slipped notices offering free fish under doors in the Regent Park development. A limit of one 10-pound box per person was imposed so that no one would be turned away.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

The family of the late Leonard Alfred Cannon wish to thank our relatives and friends for their kind expressions of sympaty, floral tributes and donations to the Heart Fund. We would also like to extend our very special thanks to Rev. Laura Butler for her comforting words.—Mrs. Shirley Cannon and Family.

I would like to thank all the friends of my Aunt, Miss Nona Rich, who came to her funeral. Douglas Jones.

9 IN MEMORIAM

BURNS—In loving memory of Robert Burns who passed away January 23rd, 1966. A dear husband, Dad and Grandpa. Fondly remembered and sadly missed by his loving wife Jean and family.
"Till we meet again."

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD, AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD. AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR HE YEARS CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
—WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS.

GARDENING

The Life Span of a Seed . . .

Newcomers to vegetable gardening have been asking whether seed left over from last year will be any use this year. Most of them are likely to be quite satisfactory, and some will be good for two or three more years.

There are several conditions which affect the length of time any seed will remain viable, the most important being the type of season in which it was produced. A poor season results in poor grade seed.

Next comes storage conditions. A cool dry place free from frost is essential otherwise deterioration will be rapid. Gases from fertilizers and toxic sprays, also gases given off by fruits, vegetables and roots in storage can be harmful. Even capped bottles of weed killer (2, 4D) stored with seeds have prevented germination, or caused grotesque growth in the plants.

Careless handling, freezing in a warehouse, freight car or truck, excessive dampness, or excessive drying when placed near heating units or displayed in sunny show windows, can impair the life of otherwise perfect seeds.

In the home, a drawer in the kitchen cabinet at floor level and against an outside wall is probably the best storage place. All opened seed packets should have the air squeezed out and the tops folded down, the bundled together with a rubber band

While no person can predict accurately the life of any seed, years of testing have produced an approximate storage time for the No. 1 grade. Cheaper seeds, grade 2 and 3, will not do nearly so well.

1 YEAR ONLY: Onion family: leek, chive, onion and garlic. Leek may give some germination second year.

2 YEARS: Sweet pepper.

3 YEARS: All peas and beans, spinach, carrot, celery, celeriac, kohlrabi, sweet corn.

3 TO 4 YEARS: Cabbage family: Kale, cauliflower, Brussels sprouts, broccoli, and all head cabbage.

4 YEARS: Turnip and rutabaga, beet, tomato, chard, radish, eggplant.

4 TO 5 YEARS: Cucumber, pumpkin, squash, marrow, melon; these seeds improve with age giving best crops when 3 to 4 years old.

5 YEARS: Endive.

6 TO 8 YEARS: all lettuce.

Mark every packet of seed with the year of purchase. When the approximate life span has been reached, try a germination test to determine if the remainder is worth keeping.

Soak a piece of flannel or folded cotton material in water, lay on a saucer, put 10 seeds on the material, and cover with the wet material. Keep constantly moist at 70 degs. F (21 C) for 48 hours.

If five seeds show signs of sprouting you have 50 per cent germination, and the seeds are worth sowing. Three sprouts equal 33 per cent germination and will give a crop if sown thickly. Less than three suggests dumping the seed into a short row and enjoying whatever appears.

Apparent poor germination in the garden can result from sowing in a cold wet soil, or too dry a soil; damage by insects, smothering with too much soil, or pilfering by birds; careless cultivating and weeding, and careless watering which dislodges the seed. None of these are the fault of the seed or the seed producer.

STEEL BUILDINGS
Considering a new building this spring, now is the time to find out the facts as to how muc it is going to cost.
We have available now for immediate construction, 2 buildings — 30x60 and 40x60.
We also build cement block structures anywhere in B.C. and do complete turn-key jobs such as wiring, plumbing and cement work.
Phone or write now for prices and information:

Blueprint for Emergencies

The federal government has a new man heading its Emergency Planning Canada for British Columbia and a new concept of how emergency help should be given.

A. H. John Blake arrived from Ottawa this month to take over as EPC regional director.

In his office at 816 Government Wednesday, Blake outlined the change of government policy that led to formation of the EPC last April.

"The EPC resulted from a new policy of the federal government which has federal departments becoming more involved with peacetime emergency planning," he said, "In effect, the Cabinet has stated that all government departments will respond to emergencies within the area of their expertise."

Stressing that the EPC's role is to respond to requests from the provincial government's Provincial Emergency Plan organization, Blake said there were 24 federal agencies in Victoria and another 37 in Vancouver that could be brought into action.

The new organization for emergency assistance has detined 63 types of emergencies. Of these, 43 have been assigned "lead departments" (departments which would take a lead role in an emergency). Lead departments have still to be chosen for the other types of emergencies.

In addition to the lead departments, other departments would act as resource agencies, giving inputs of their specific expertise and facilities.

Blake said emergency situations could be caused by a variety of events including animal epidemics, floods, disturbances and strikes.

He was asked if the EPC would go into action if there is a strike or lockout of municipal employees in the Greater Victoria area.

Blake said the EPC would only respond if asked to do so by the provincial government.

As an example, he said, if the stoppage of garbage collections lead to a health hazard in the opinion of the chief medical officer and subsequently, the provincial government asked the EPC for help, members of the armed forces might be used.

Part of his duties, Blake explained, was to ensure federal agencies in the province were geared for potential emergencies.

"I have to identify special requirements for potential emergencies. As an example, I have to think ahead and advise federal departments preparing for the spring flood season," he said.

In line with this thinking, Blake said the federal health and welfare department had medical supplies stockpiled at 57 locations in B.C.

While an invasion of locusts could trigger an emergency situation in Saskatchewan, Blake said B.C.'s most obvious dangers were floods and water pollution.

With the impending establishment of a port for supertankers on the Washington coast, probably at Port Angeles, Blake conceded it might be necessary to beef up the resources of the ministry of transport, the department responsible for dealing with pollution problems in navigable waters.

Blake said another aspect of his duties is to monitor existing services in relation to probable needs.

If these services in his opinion were inadequate his department could become another pipeline of pressure for action by federal politicians.

He could make recommendations to the EPC's governing body, the Emergency Planning Secretariat, which through the Privy Council, has access to the Cabinet.

Students Seek Better Courses

Students in the University of Victoria's education department, which produces elementary and high school teachers, are unhappy with what they term their "mickey mouse" training.

"They want some relevant materials, some good old "how-to's," department professional-year student David Grubb said today.

"They are looking for the skills and techniques to pass on knowledge," he said.

"The professional-year students are notorious for grumbling about mickey-mouse courses and busy work," said Grubb.

This year some students are beginning to act.

A small group of students got together at the start of term several weeks ago to discuss the dissatisfaction and try to pinpoint problems, he said.

Both education dean George Pederson and associate dean Norma Mickelson came to talk to the group, he said.

"They have concern. They're honestly trying to do something about it. They wish to bring a balance about so the courses reflect what's going on."

He described "a better balance" as ideally occurring between theoretical and practical learning, and cited the case of a pyschology course taken by professional-year students.

Future teachers in that course can't help asking "how do we use it?" when learning of psychology concepts such as the well-known behavior modification, he said.

"In a high school you can't use it (behavior modification) because kids in grade 10 already have it psyched out," said Grubb.

Student criticism of education courses is legitimate to a certain extent, said Pedersen.

"I really am quite critical of teacher education programs."

Over the past year and a half the dean has organized retreats for department faculty "to try to come up with a more rational procedure for training teachers," he said.

He set up a program development committee about a year ago, composed of both faculty and students "to provide us with ways to totally revamp the undergraduate program," he said.

That committee should be ready to present a position paper within a few weeks, he said.

Acupuncture's Role Stressed in Medicine

When an acupuncture research program was being organized in Toronto several months ago, 300 patient volunteers were needed — and 15,000 people offered themselves.

Dr. Elie Cass, speaker at the Men's Canadian Club luncheon in Victoria today, says acupuncture isn't a cure-all but "it should be another tool in the doctor's medical bag."

He is president of the fledgling Acupuncture Foundation of Canada, a Toronto-centred non-profit organization of doctors dedicated to use of acupuncture as a form of treatment.

A general practitioner and coroner for York County in Ontario since 1957, he became interested in the subject when acupuncture brought some relief to his son's back ailment. He has since studied the technique in France, England, Austria, Switzerland and the U.S.

Cass is convinced only doctors are best qualified to practise acupuncture because of their training, including ability to make proper diagnosis. There is a place for acupuncture in dentistry as well and the foundation has passed 65 dentists along with 250 doctors through courses in its first year of operation.

Like many other forms of therapy there are theories how acupuncture works but no proof positive, he said today.

The traditional Chinese theory for the ancient healing technique assumes there is vital energy, called "chi," flowing through the body along invisible paths called "meridians."

In good health, energy is in balance in the meridian system but with disease, there is an imbalance or blockage.

Inserting the needles at special points along the meridians, unblocks or restores the energy balance, say the Chinese, who blend their interpretation with philosophical theories expounded in Taoism.

One current explanation in the western world, called the "double gate" theory, assumes the body's nerve transmission lines for signalling pain contain some form of switches or gates, which can be closed to one source of pain by introduction of stimulus from the acupuncture needles.

More sophisticated theories are emerging and there is a need for continuing research, said Cass. A new clinic the foundation is opening in Toronto this spring will research as well as offer doctors training and patients therapy.

Among the advantages of acupuncture:

It is simple to administer, there are no lasting side effects, it is safe in skilled hands, relatively inexpensive and results are often evident almost immediately.

Cass said proponents have "an uphill fight" in educating the medical profession and the public on the subject.

"But as doctors we have a duty to use whatever means we can for our patients to help them."

Acupuncture's most obvious application is in relief of pain but it is also effective in other conditions which are reversible, he said.

Bawlf's 'Gall' Gets to Gorst

Esquimalt MLA Jim Gorst has accused Victoria developer Sam Bawlf of "unmitigated gall accompanied by effrontery and audacity" because the city alderman said the provincial government is negligent in supplying city core housing.

Bawlf has given eviction notice to about 35 elderly residents of a Chinatown apartment on Pandora Avenue. He blamed the province for lack of vacancies for such people.

"The provincial government has to do something about the downtown core," he said.

"Here is a developer brazenly attempting to blame the provincial government for the social ills which he is creating," he said.

The MLA criticized Bawlf for "throwing these people into the street while he holds the trusted position of alderman through which he will receive approval for this very same development."

Gorst also stood up for his NDP party's programs for senior citizens.

"This government has done more in two years to benefit the elderly than any government has done before," said Gorst.

Climate Shift Warning

WINNIPEG (CP) — Abrupt and largely unpredictable changes in climate are likely to continue to haunt the world, an internationally-known climatoligist said Wednesday.

Dr. Kenneth Hare of the University of Toronto told a University of Winnipeg audience that such changes could have disastrous effects on the human economy.

"I think we have to recognize the overwhelming implications of the departure of climate form its present norms," he said.

"It is something that could and probably will within the next ten years cause a colossal crisis in the world."

Dr. Hare called the 1972 crop season "the worst in the history of agricultural man" and noted that 1974 almost shared that dubious distinction.

B.C. Ferries Launches Recruiting Program

British Columbia Ferries has launched an extensive long-term recruiting campaign for marine engineers and certificated deck officers, general manager Charles Gallagher said today.

He said there is a worldwide shortage of qualified personnel in both fields and B.C. Ferries has to make its move early with three new vessels coming into service in 1976.

Some of the engineers and deck officers can find immediate employment here because of normal attrition, he said.

Gallagher said the recruiting drive will be an on-going process and British Columbians will be giben top priority.

Canadians from other provinces get second priority and third priority will go to those from Commonwealth countries.

It will not be a case of the recruiting drive starting and stopping but it would continue during the year, both for immediate and long-term needs, he added.

Nor is it the first recruiting drive.

A similar one was carried out in 1974, although the that time.

shortage was less acute at

Gallagher said he hopes workers will be lured here by the climate and the beneficial working conditions, including the ability to return home each night, unlike some marine services.

UVic Censure To End

Academic censure of the University of Victoria will likely be lifted soon, four years after it was placed by the Canadian Association of University Teachers.

The move was announced today by UVic President Dr. Howard Petch and association president Dr. Richard Spencer of University of B.C.

Spencer will recommend to the May meeting of the association council that the university be freed of the censure.

"Censure has had effects in rather intangible ways," said Petch. "There's been a loss of time (because of debate on the matter.) People don't like being censured."

Censure is a sign of disapproval of certain administrative methods at a university.

Former UVic President Bruce Partridge received the censure in 1971 and it remained through Hugh Farquhar's term as president.

The censure was placed when the contracts of professors were not renewed.

Province Promises More for Housing

SURREY (CP)—Municipalities will get more government help with housing when the provincial budget is brought down in the spring, Housing Minister Loren Nicolson said Wednesday.

But the municipalities will have to start chopping away red tape if the housing crisis is to be resolved, he said.

Nicholson, speaking at an NDP meeting, said while he didn't know exactly what form the assistance would take, he was sure that Premier Barrett considered it a priority.

He suggested the assistance might be tied to an increase the provincial government is seeking in the export price of natural gas.

Nicholson dwelt on the accomplishments of the provincial housing department in its one year of operation. In that time the department built half as many senior citizen units as the previous government built in 20 years, he said.

His department is striving to make more remote parts of B.C. attractive in order to take the population pressure off urban areas, particularly Greater Vancouver, he added.

$5,000 Grant

An artist-in-residence grant for the full amount requested by Victoria Symphony board has been approved by Canada Council.

The nominated artist must have exhibited a high standard of expertise in the relevant art form and be either a Canadian citizen or a landed immigrant with more than one year's residence.

Symphony concertmaster Harry Cawood was nominated together with a request for the $5,000 which has been awarded.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Today's deal is unquestionably a tough one to play correctly. When it arose in a recent rubber-bridge game, our South declarer went down at his game contract. In the postmortem analysis, it was revealed that the contract could have been fulfilled. Neither side vulnerable. North deals.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	1 ♠	1 NT	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♠.

East played low on West's opening lead of the spade jack, and South's king captured the trick. On the bidding, East, rather than West, figured to have the king of clubs. However, declarer could afford to lose a club trick to East, since dummy's remaining 10-8-6 of spades would prevent East from cashing more than two spade tricks. But he couldn't afford to lose a club trick to West, since a spade return by West through dummy might enable East to cash four spade tricks.

So, to minimize the chances of West obtaining the lead, at trick two South laid down his ace of clubs in order to guard against West's possession of the singleton king. To trick three declarer led another club, hoping that East had the king. But West won the trick and the return of his remaining spade trapped the board's ten-spot, and enabled East to cash four spade tricks.

South was correct in his handling of the club suit. However, by that time it was already too late. As so often happens, declarer did not consider matters carefully enough at trick one. He should have allowed West's jack of spades to have won the first trick!

A second spade lead would then be taken by East's ace, felling South's king. Dummy's remaining 10-8 of spades would now effectively prevent East from making more than his queen of spades.

Upon regaining the lead, South would enter dummy via a heart or a diamond, and lead the queen of clubs for a finesse. If East had the king, by repeated finesses South would bring home five club tricks. And if West had the king, he would win the trick (as he did). But he would have no spade to play back. Declarer would now end up making two hearts, three diamonds, and four clubs.

Dial A for Assassination

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Sen. Lowell Weicker, holding a catalog of potential assassination devices such as explosive cigarette cases, today urged Congress to create a permanent committ to keep watch on the CIA and FBI.

The outspoken Connecticut Republican and Sen. Howard Baker (R-Tenn.) introduced a bill to form a new joint legislative committee to keep watch over all U.S. intelligence gathering and law enforcement agencies.

"This shows what happens when we have been derelict in our duties," said Weicker as he made public a catalog of booby-trapped devices prepared by a laboratory in Lexandria, Va., and circulated among some law enforcement agencies.

The catalog including explosive flashlights, cigarette cases and telephone receivers was accompanied by a letter which said circulation of the list was not a specific order to sell. But it also said the devices could be sold to "authorized agencies" for use abroad.

"The devices have been designed and manufactured for sale to authorized agencies of the U.S. government, specifically intended for application outside of this country," the letter added.

In the house, the 24-member Democratic steering and policy committee put off a final decision today on a proposal to name a select committee to probe intelligence gathering agencies.

A flurry of hearings and other action has been prompted in Congress by recent allegations that the CIA conducted spying on dissident Americans in the 1950s and '60s.

Several law enforcement officials said this was the first time they had seen evidence that a domestic federal agency would even look at assassination techniques.

Weicker described the devices as "used for assassination, pure and simple."

"There is no place in this country for this sort of thing," he added.

The senator said he had been told that the agency's men had done nothing to encourage the manufacturer to think that he might make a sale to their agency.

"My question was, why in the hell didn't they do something to discourage him," Weicker said.

Nanaimo Slates Talks With School Strikers

NANAIMO — Talks were to resume here this afternnoon between Nanaimo school board and locked-out members of Local 606 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

School board chairman Joe Kilner said today the board asked provincial mediator Clark Gilmour to bring the two sides together to begin negotiations again.

The board had broken off negotiations late Friday and withdrawn all its contract offers.

On Tuesday it locked out the 175 CUPE members, who are the non-teaching staff of the school district.

Nanaimo teachers refused to cross the picket lines, and schools in the district were closed.

Kilner said the CUPE members will remain locked out and schools will remain closed even after talks start.

On Wednesday Nanaimo District Teachers Association and about 100 parents wired the provincial government to urge that the 43 locked up schools be re-opened.

Most of the area's 12,300 students are at home, but some schooling continues, said Gordon Sanborn, chairman of the NDTA learning conditions committee. Visiting teachers are still giving lessons at hospitals and private homes to pupils who are not able to attend regular classes, and examinations are being supervised in places such as Brechin United Church hall for scholarship students.

Until this week some field trips also were being organized.

Co-Op Housing Funds Remain In CMHC Coffer

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal programs for co-operative and non-profit housing are facing serious problems with much of the program budget remaining unspent, says co-operative and non-profit groups have trouble getting their projects approved by the Central Mortgage and Housing Corp., partly because the corporation expects these amateur groups to be as efficient as private developers.

The government should be more involved in helping groups to be as efficient as private developers.

The government should be more involved in helping groups get their projects designed and built, the report suggests. This could be done by establishing some organization to assit non-profit housing.

Jeffrey Patterson, council housing director, said the report has the support of the majority of the council's housing committee. It was prepared by Christopher Haire, a former Carleton University student now attending a Hungarian university under a Canada-Hungary exchange plan.

Non-profit and co-operative groups control only about half of one per cent of dwellings in the country, the report said.

Amendments to the National Housing Act in June, 1973 were designed to stimulate non-profit and co-operative housing by providing funds to help groups make applications and by extending loans at low interest rates — about eight per cent.

But, Haire said that of $169 million budgeted by CMHC for mortgages to non-profit and co-operative groups in 1974, only $115 million had been spent by mid-November.

In October, about $17 million was diverted to the rental housing program by Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson to bolster the sagging apartment market.

Only 29 per cent of the money spent was for family housing, the rest directed to housing for the elderly.

"There is certainly a need for housing for the elderly, but we believe there must be serious problems with the program if it is not economically feasible to develop family housing projects . . . under it," the report said.

Victim at Fault, Inquest Rules

A coroner's jury ruled Wednesday night a 57-year-old Esquimalt pedestrian fatally injured Dec. 30 was to blame for his own death.

George Brebber, 1160 Esquimalt, died Jan. 14 of pneumonia resulting from broken ribs when he was hit by a car in front of his apartment.

The jury found that "through his lack of judgment, affected by possible impairment, Brebber unwisely proceeded at a place other than a crosswalk, into a dangerous traffic condition."

The jury also said Brebber's dark clothing was a likely contributing factor in the accident.

No blame was attached to cab driver Blair Birch, 26, of 889 Cloverdale.

Brebber's wife testified Monday night that the night of the accident her husband had dinner, three beers, a sleeping pill and two Valium capsules prescribed by a doctor. He then laid down for an hour and 15 minutes before going outdoors.

The jury expressed its concern about the prescriptions of medicines to people with a drinking problem, and "being very much laymen, we wonder what precautions can be taken in such cases."

No measure of alcohol or drug content in the man's blood was taken when he arrived at Victoria General Hospital following the accident.

TWO HELD FOR FIRE DEATHS

MANILA (AP) — Police are holding two welders today they say may have accidentally started the fire that killed at least 42 persons in a five-storey factory building 15 miles east of Manila.

Investigators ruled out arson, but the chief of the Marikina criminal investigation division said the welders might be charged with reckless negligence resulting in homicide.

CID chief Marcos Cotico said 42 bodies had been recovered and at least 80 persons were seriously injured in the fire Wednesday in the suburban town of Marikina. But other sources said at least 51 were dead.

It was the heaviest fire toll in Philippine history.

Lt. Reynato Ignacio of the Marikina fire department said the investigation indicated the fire started in a ground-floor storeroom of a shoe factory where the two welders were working, and sparks from their welding rods may have ignited combustible materials in the room.

CITY VANDALS COST $2,833

Vandalism last year in Victoria's parks and on boulevards cost a total of $2,833, an increase of nearly $800 on the previous year, parks administrator Cliff Bate informed the parks committee today.

Nearly half the total occurred in Beacon Hill Park where damage amounted to $1,329 — more than three times the 1973 total of $432.

Bate's report noted that five separate outbreaks of vandalism occurred Oct. 17, amounting to a total of $470. Parks committee chairman Ald. Clyde Savage said it was obviously some kind of wrecking spree.

Said Ald. Alf Hood: "I think it's disgusting. Trees chopped down on Dallas Rd., hanging baskets pinched . . . it's just craziness."

However, Bate said Victoria suffers far less from parks vandalism than most Canadian cities.

Qualicum To Rule On Chamber

QUALICUM BEACH — A decision on granting funds to Qualicum Beach Chamber of Commerce will be made by village council March. 3.

Meanwhile the annual debate is in full tilt between those favoring public support of chamber activities and those who consider the chamber the responsibility of merchants who belong to it.

The grant until two years ago had been $2,000, largely to support tourist promotion. Last year it was trimmed to $1,200 when council decided to put aid on a per capita basis.

This year the chamber wants to restore the grant to $2,000.

At the same time, council maintains its policy of several years' standing not to make charitable donations, this week rejecting the Salvation Army.

Longshoremen Vote Strike

VANCOUVER (CP) — The 3,400 longshoremen in British Columbia's major ports have voted 92 per cent in favor of strike action but a union representative says there is no danger of an immediate strike.

Don Garcia, Canadian area president of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union said Wednesday that negotiations with the B.C. Maritime Employers' Association are continuing and some progress has been made

Garcia said the employers have offered a 92-cent-an-hour increase and the union wants $1.50.

Base rate in the previous contract, which expired Dec. 31, was $6.08 an hour. The longshoremen are seeking a one-year contract and are not demanding a cost-of-living increase.

The federal government which has jurisdiction over dock work has waives conciliation proceedings in the negotiations at the request of the union and with the approval of the employers.

DRUNK . . . TO ORDER

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Vancouver police constable guzzled his way into hospital Tuesday as a result of drinking on duty.

The police brass are sorry it happened, but the policeman was under orders to get drunk

As part of the department's training program for breathalizer operators, an afternoon's drinking is authorized and the results are tabulated by the breathalyzer. Then the officers are driven home.

Constable D. A. Boyd was well into his course with a reading of .16 (legal impairment is .08) when he collapsed in convulsions.

B.C. Indians May Seek U.S. Foreign Aid Funds

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — After rejecting a federal capital grant offer for the second time, district Indian chiefs said Wednesday they will apply for foreign aid if the government doesn't agree to their request for $1 million.

The chiefs said a meeting Saturday of the Lakes District Council of Chiefs, representing about 4,200 Northern Interior Indians, rejected a federal offer of $567,000, which was $63,000 more than the first grant offered.

"If the department of Indians affairs will not consider increasing the amount of the capital projects fund as requested, the district council will have to apply for foreign aid to improve the living conditions in the district," the chiefs said in a press release.

The chiefs said that the department's own figures show 50 per cent of district homes have no running water, 69 per cent lack sanitary sewers and 40 per cent no electricity.

NEIGHBORS WON'T QUIT

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Groups of Indians from two Stuart Lake villages are diligently but unsuccessfully continuing a search for the bodies of two of their people whose snowmobile plunged through thin ice Jan. 8.

On Wednesday, they issued an appeal for equipment and technical equipment from the residents of Prince George to help with the search.

Jasper Joseph and his cousin, David Joseph, were returning to Portage village when their snowmobiles broke through the ice within two miles of the village.

A third man, Alex Joseph, also went through the ice, but closer to shore and his body was found. Divers and RCMP gave up their search for the two other bodies after two days.

Ed John, district council chairman, said Wednesday, "They won't quit until the bodies are found.

"There are between 30 and 50 people out there every day. They cook on the ice and some are missing work to help."

Delinquents Decline: Levi

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — Human Resources Minister Norm Levi said Wednesday there are probably less than 100 hard core juvenile delinquents in British Columbia.

Replying to demands from the North Vancouver Chamber of Commerce for action on juvenile delinquency, Levi said a reasoned approach is the answer to the problem.

"What we are dealing with now is less children in terms of the total population than ever dealt with before, regardless of how they came to attention, whether in courts or through the department," he said.

Chamber president John Rienstra said the people of his area are worried about "vandalism, hooliganism and just plain terrorism."

"It is a hard thing for us to ask but you are the minister and we want you to fix it up so people can walk the streets again without being afraid," he said.

Levi said that when the NDP took office in 1972, there were 11,000 people 18 and under in the courts of B.C. Now there are about 9,000.

The minister ascribed the lower number of cases before the courts to NDP programs, adding that the most-complained-about activities involve "an extremely small number of children—it is suggested less than 100 in the whole province."

Levi rejected curfews and citizens' vigilante groups.

LIFE SAVINGS TAKEN

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mary Stepulaitis, 57, of Vancouver lost her life savings of $5,005 Tuesday to two women who forced her to withdraw the money from her bank account.

Mrs. Stepulaitis told police two women she did not know approached her on a street, took her purse and found her bank book inside. She said the women led her to a car and dove to a Royal Bank branch.

While one woman waited in the car, the other accompanied Mrs. Stepulaitis to the door of the bank. She said the women told her they had a gun.

Mrs. Stepulaitis went into the bank, withdrew the money from her account and gave it to the two strangers who then drove away.

Rupert Tender Let

VANCOUVER (CP) — Revenue Minister Ron Basford's Ottawa office Wednesday announced a $15,510,000 contract has been awarded to Dillingham Corp. of Vancouver for the construction of a general cargo wharf at Prince Rupert.

Basford said the contract, which marks the second stage toward completion of cargo-handling facilities to be known as fairview terminals, is expected to be completed in approximately a year.

50 SPIES IN CANADA—HURTIG

RCMP, CIA Hand in Hand

TORONTO (CP) — Edmonton publisher Mel Hurtig said Wednesday that at least 50 spies from the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) of the United States have worked in Canada with the full knowledge and co-operation of the RCMP.

Mr. Hurtig, founder of the Committee for an Independent Canada, told the local committee chapter that the CIA also has field officers working as attaches and counsul-generals in Toronto, Calgary and Vancouver.

He said a Canadian security organization—the police and security planning and analysis group—knows about the operations and they "open their files" to the CIA.

Mr. Hurtig said Col. Robert Bourne, assistant deputy minister in charge of the security group which is under the federal solicitor-general's department, "regularly makes his secret files available to the CIA."

He said in an interview later that his information about the RCMP, the CIA and Col. Bourne will be given to Solicitor-General Warren Allmand today.

He produced a typewritten list which he said contained names of all CIA agents "working under the guise of legal or cultural affairs at U.S. consulates in Canada."

Mr. Hurtig refused to reveal the names, which he said were given to him Wednesday by a Montreal newspaper, saying the paper planned to print the list next Thursday.

Although Mr. Hurtig would not reveal the source of his information, he said it came from a friend with a high-level contact inside the police and security group.

He said Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau misled the public when he declared three years ago that there were no CIA agents in Canada.

"Anyone who believes that the CIA would not infiltrate a country like Canada where the U.S. has enormous assets, is very naive," the publisher said.

He said the remedy to the infiltration is for the RCMP "to do its job."

Canada's police and security planning and analysis group was set up three years ago to receive and evaluate information from the RCMP, the armed forces and external affairs.

TAXPAYERS TAKE POOL PLUNGE

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The Canadian taxpayer could end up paying as much as half the cost of Prime Minister Trudeau's $200,000 swimming pool.

This was revealed Wednesday when it became known that the anonymous group of donors who are paying for the pool will be able to claim the donations under the gift tax provisions of the Income Tax Act.

If all 25 of the donors are in a sufficiently-high income tax bracket this will lop a considerable amount from the bite they pay the federal treasury.

A spokesman for the donors, Dr. W. H. Fader of Toronto confirmed Wednesday that some of the donors were aware that they could claim a tax deduction before they made the commitment to the pool.

Two MPs, meanwhile, tried without success to determine in the commons Wednesday exactly who is paying for the pool.

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) called for an investigation to determine the names of the private donors financing the 20-foot by 40-foot enclosed pool.

His motion, requiring unanimous consent to come to a vote, was lost in a chorus of "Nos" from Liberal MPs.

A similar attempt by Tom Cossitt (PC—Leeds) was ruled out of order by Speaker James Jerome.

Knowles said outside the Commons that the public has a right to know who the contributors are and whether any potential conflict of interest might occur.

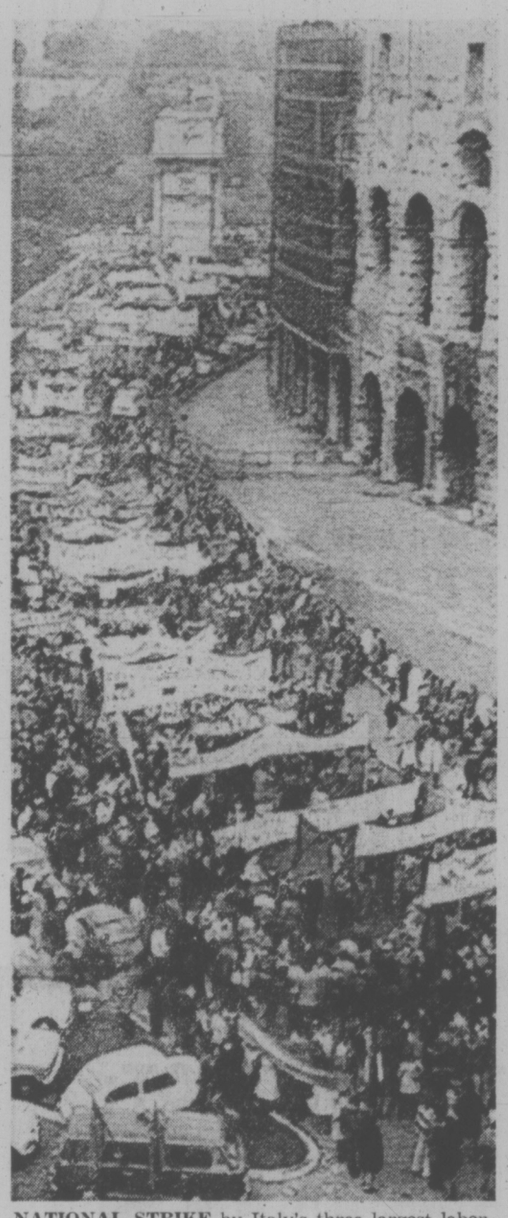
Trudeau said last week he does not know, and does not want to find out, who the donors are.

Officials say the pool will serve Trudeau and future prime ministers.

Knowles said the pool should be financed with public money to eliminate suspicion.

It was just as wrong for Trudeau to accept a privately-financed pool as it was for Health Minister Marc Lalonde to accept a free trip to Israel on a Seagram's Distillers jet last year, he added.



NATIONAL STRIKE by Italy's three largest labor unions creates massive traffic jams in Rome but failed to have much other effect. Crowd estimated at 200,000 marches past the Colosseum today on their way to a rally to press demands for cost-of-living and pension increases as well as a guaranteed annual wage.

Buttons Irk Female MPs

By IAIN HUNTER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Two female Liberal MP's are angrily campaigning against the button which Health Minister Marc Lalonde is peddling to help liberate Canadian women.

Simma Holt (Vancouver-Kingsway) and Iona Campagnolo (Skenna) won't wear theirs and they're not afraid to say "Why Not."

"It's bloddy degrading," snapped Mrs. Holt.

She charged that Lalonde has been misled into endorsing the button by his "office full of surrogate wives."

"I consider it to be sexist in tone," declared Mrs. Campagnolo a little more delicately.

The two B.C. MP's said Wednesday that none of the Liberal women in the House of Commons are wearing the button bearing the slogan "Why Not," and they appear to be intimidating their male colleagues to ditch theirs as well.

Even Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, who made a statement in the Commons Wednesday supporting International Women's Year, was not wearing the button given to him by his own health minister.

Detractors of the button claim that the "Why Not" could be taken as an invitation to something other than equality of status.

Mrs. Campagnolo said the button could be taken as having "a sexual connotation."

Both she and Mrs. Holt felt Trudeau was expressing sympathy for their anti-campaign but telling them it was too late to pull back the button.

Meanwhile, unaware that his campaign was going sour in the capital, Lalonde was distributing buttons as fast as he could in the Northwest Territories.

Mrs. Holt said that none the women in the Liberal caucus are wearing the button and that she sent hers back to Lalonde's office. Male MP's are getting rid of theirs as well, she reported.

The Vancouver MP suggested that the health minister may have been misled into endorsing the button because of the number of women in his office. He has two female assistants and his parliamentary secretary is Coline Campbell (South Western Nova).

"He's got an office full of surrogate wives, and I guess he thinks that's being liberated," Mrs. Holt snapped. "It's sexist, look at it," she added.

NEWS BRIEFS

Swarm of Quakes Rattles California

BRAWLEY, Calif. (UPI) — A "swarm" of strong earthquakes jolted southern California early today, less than 12 hours after another milder tremor shook residents of Santa Monica and Malibu.

The swarm, the term used by seismologists for a series of quakes, began at 4:30 a.m. and ranged in magnitude from 3.7 to 4.3 on the Richter Scale, according to the seismology laboratory at Caltech in Pasadena.

Mortgage Rate Cut

OTTAWA (CP) — Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. (CMHC) reduced its mortgage lending rate today to 10¾ per cent from 11¼ per cent for loans to house buyers under the Assisted Home Ownership Program (AHOP).

Weekly Pay Rises

OTTAWA (CP) — Average weekly earnings of more than four million workers rose 13.8 per cent during the 12 months to November last year, outstripping the 12-per-cent increase in consumer prices in the corresponding period, Statistics Canada reported Wednesday.

More Families Move

ASBESTOS, Que. (CP) — Another 25 families are expected to move out today after four homes slithered into a 950-foot open-pit asbestos mine Wednesday. About 50 families were evacuated earlier. A seven-block area of the town's main street has been blocked off and police are guarding against the looting of abandoned homes.

Mint Talks Break

OTTAWA (CP)—Negotiations between the Royal Canadian Mint and the Public Service Alliance, representing 550 striking workers, broke off again Wednesday. The employees have been on strike since Jan. 9 in mint offices at Ottawa, Hull, Que., and Winnipeg and the walkout has halted production of coins.

U.K. Vote on ECM

LONDON (UPI)—Prime Minister Harold Wilson plans to call a natonal referendum this summer to dicide whether Britain should remain in the nine-nation European Common Market. Government officials said Wilson will announce plans for the referendum this afternoon in a statement to parliament.

ENOUGH!

In council debate on granting $143 to Vancouver Island Publicity Bureau, Coleman said:

"The philosophy is this — do we want any more people wandering around the Island? I say the answer is a firm no." He said there are "too many people on the Island already. We should be looking at ways to keep tourists away."

He was the only objector and the grant — up $33 over 1974 — passed council.

Municipal Lockout Not for 2 Weeks

A lockout of Greater Victoria municipal and school board employees appears impossible for at least two weeks.

Mediation officer Clark Gilmour has tentative meetings scheduled for this period with almost all the groups involved in current bargaining for new contracts.

He submitted his report to Labor Minister Bill King Wednesday regarding the city outside workers but not in the other disputes.

A decision by the municipalities and school board to lock out all employees if there is a single strike cannot be implemented until the mediation officer has withdrawn, according to the Labor Act.

The 280 city outside workers, members of CUPE Local 50, have posted strike notice and will be free to strike as soon as King notifies the local he has received Gilmour's report.

Local 50 president Jim Walker said no decision has been made when to strike the city and no decision will be made until King says he has received Gilmour's report.

King is expected to communicate receipt to Gilmour's report within a few days.

Gilmour is still the mediation officer in disputes involving the Greater Victoria school board, Victoria inside staff, Capital Regional District, Saanich, Sidney, Esquimalt and Oak Bay.

He said the cheques should have been delivered this morning but workers were told they would get them at 4 p.m., after banks closed. He said he was contacting the labor department about this.

However, a payroll department spokesman said Walker's accusation was "rubbish."

"He's talking through his hat. We had a breakdown in the computer last night. They worked last night, corrected it, the cheques were run this morning and they've all been delivered," he said.

Record Donations To USC Campaign

The Unitarian Service Committee annual campaign in Greater Victoria, sponsored for the past 21 years by the Victoria Times, has been officially closed with a record total of contributions — $21,427.39.

That surpasses the best previous year by almost $5,000.

But it falls a little short of the target, which was $22,785, the cost of buying, insuring and shipping a 36,000-pound carload of powdered milk to famine-struck Bangladesh.

"May I, through you, send a jubilant, very, very warm 'thank you' to all your readers who dipped into their pockets to send lifesaving Canadian milk to the starving children in Bangladesh."

Contributions, big and small, came from all corners of the community. A note with a recent donation of $5 reads simply:

Despite an official end to the campaign, there is a chance the total could yet hit the target.

A UVic professor who wishes to remain anonymous has challenged students to contribute $500. If they do, he will add $100 and is confident other faculty members will donate as well.

Since 1953, Times readers have contributed a total of $239,622.95.

Knight Seeks Unemployment Insurance

Dr. Stanley Knight, deposed director of the education department's research and development division, will start receiving unemployment insurance benefits in late February.

Knight filed his application for benefits today and was told he would start receiving $113 a week on Feb. 21.

During his six months as division director he received $498 a week.

Under the terms of unemployment insurance, Knight must seek three jobs a week, and he told reporters he listed his preferences as director of a research and development division, president of a university, or dean of education.

Gov't Aid Sought By Park Villages

By HUMPHREY DAVY
Times Staff

UCLUELET — Tofino and Ucluelet spokesmen Wednesday demanded senior government assistance to help the heavily burdened villages provide services to the thousands of visitors to the Long Beach section of Pacific Rim National Park.

The plea was made at a public meeting attended by officials from Parks Canada regional headquarters in Calgary. The meeting — and another tonight at Tofino — was held to discuss this year's development plans at Long Beach.

The federal parks branch plans to spend $3.2 million on the whole of the park which includes the Broken Islands and the West Coast Trail between Bamfield and Port Renfrew.

Of this sum, $1.7 million will be for land acquisition within the park at Long Beach and the Broken Islands.

In addition, $1.1 million will be used for upgrading park facilities at Long Beach.

Despite these expenditures, aldermen and mayors of the two communities said the senior governments are not helping the villages cope with the annual influx.

Ken Gibson, deputy mayor of Tofino, said the village faces a severe water problem.

"Why should we pay to improve our water services for people who come to visit the park," he asked.

Ucluelet Mayor Bob Russell said that basically residents are involved in logging and fishing.

"We haven't the funds to pay the expenses for sewage and garbage disposal for all the people who come here."

"What is needed is leadership on the part of senior governments to solve some of these problems."

Ontario Kidnapper Captured

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Police armed with rifles and using tear gas flushed Donald Wayne Cline out of a townhouse before dawn today, ending a drama that started Tuesday.

Cline, 22, who escaped from prison last October, surrendered quietly after police lobbed tear gas into the house in which he was hiding.

He earlier had released unharmed a 12-year-old boy he had held hostage for 33 hours.

"It went smooth as silk," Police Chief Walter Johnson said moments after the capture. "He came out right away as soon as he knew we meant business."

There was no known connection between Cline and the residents of the house and no other people were found there, police said.

Inspector Jeff Cooper of the Ontario Provincial Police said he did not know how much of the $10,000 ransom was recovered, but Chief Johnson said some cash was found and some money had been burned.

The house, on Boullee Street in the city's north end, was surrounded by police at about 4 a.m.

Police talked with Cline on the telephone and said that during the conversation he held a gun to the throat of a woman. He surrended 45 minutes later.

She later was identified as Gail Guest, a friend who had joined Cline in a farmhouse at Thamesford, Ont., about 15 miles east of London, Tuesday while he was holding four children for ransom.

Both Cline and Miss Guest were taken to police headquarters.

EXXON PROFIT LEAPS

NEW YORK (AP) — Exxon Corp., the world's biggest oil company and parent company of Imperial Oil of Canada, announced today fourth-quarter 1974, after-tax earnings climbed 9.3 per cent.

Earnings for the full year were up 28.5 per cent over 1973.

The quarter's net income totalled $860 million, or $3.84 a share, compared with $787 million, or $3.51 a share, in the fourth quarter of 1973—the time when Middle East producers first imposed their oil embargo against the United States and petroleum prices began their upward spiral.

Revenues rose 49 per cent to $12.57 billion, against $8.42 billion in the comparable period last year.

For the full year ended Dec. 31, Exxon said it earned $3.14 billion, or $14.03 a share, compared with 1973's $2.44 billion, or $10.90 a share.

AMIN ASKS QUEEN TO AID OVERTHROW

Times News Services

KAMPALA — Idi Amin wants to go to London to help overthrow the British government — and he wants the Queen to help him.

Radio Kampala Wednesday said that Amin had told the Queen of his planned August visit "so that you may have ample time to arrange all that is required for my comfortable stay in your country."

During the visit he intends to tour all parts of the United Kingdom "to talk to those people who are struggling for self-determination and independence from your political and economic system," the broadcast quoted him as telling the Queen.

Officials in London Wednesday night denied receiving any communication from Amin about any projected visit.

Instant Tax Refund Firms Under Fire

The provincial consumer services department has again launched an attack on the escalating number of instant income tax refund firms, cropping up around B.C.

Consumer Services Minister Phyllis Young Wednesday predicted a dramatic increase in the number of people using the refund firms this year because of deteriorating economic conditions.

She said she will push for the federal government to introduce legislation cutting refund firms "off at the knees" or outlaw the tax refund scheme.

In the meantime, her department is hoping that complaints against the firms will be reported for eventual court action under the Trade Practices Act.

Main complaint is that many of the firms offering "instant" tax refunds give customers only 50 per cent of what the actual refund should be.

A department spokesman said the new scheme is for the firm to give a customer a $50 advance at the time he submits his tax claim. The remainder is directed to the claimant only after the refund is received.

David Morris, department staff solicitor, said the scheme could be interpreted as a loan for which the interest rate can be as high as 4,000 per cent.

Morris cites the example of a person who is entitled to a $500 return who could get as little as $250 from the tax firm.

The firm gives the customer an initial $50 cash and he (the customer) is told that he will get the rest when his refund arrives from Ottawa. At that point the final payment could be only $200.

"In effect, the person pays $250 for a $50 loan for six weeks," Morris said.

Technically the firms do not operate as loan companies. Legally their business is regarded as sales, similar to that of any commodity.

Gov't Sets Condition On Taking Arab Cash

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister John Turner said Wednesday the government would welcome some private investment of Arab money in housing but would not accept loans to government agencies financing housing.

He said he would prefer that any Arab investments of new oil wealth be in the form of mortgages and not purchases of housing here.

Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson said last week that up to $1 billion in Arab money is available for mortgage loans. He had said previously that such money might be funnelled through government agencies or private lenders.

Turner, speaking to reporters outside the Commons, said the government has between $4 billion and $5 billion in its bank accounts and does not need to borrow.

"There's no intention of the government of Canada to borrow in the petrodollar market," Petrodollar is the word formed to describe Arab oil profits since prices have moved sharply higher.

Turner said the government would welcome private investments provided they did not upset currency exchange markets. A rapid influx of foreign currencies might drive up the value of the Canadian dollar, which would affect Canada's foreign trade position.

He declined comment on whether $1 billion would be enough to disrupt currency trading and affect the value of the dollar.

Danson had been asked in the Commons about his statements on loans of Arab money, but said the issue has been passed on to the finance minister.

Later, outside the House, Danson said the government should not have to borrow if the funds are available here.

"I think we have enough at home ... from government sources, of course, but also from private investors."

Kidnapper Flushed

Neighbors had been told by police to take refuge in their basements.

There was no immediate indication of how police discovered where Cline was hiding.

Provincial police said they kept track of Cline's car by using a homing device attached to the vehicle, although after Cline left the car they lost him.

Police said they did not know how Cline and Miss Guest reached London, but Inspector Cooper said "Taxis are cheap and the man had a lot of money."

His hiding place was apparently discovered about 2½ hours after Cline freed Robert Field, 12.

The boy, the last of four children held hostage, walked into provincial police headquarters accompanied by a man identified only as Red.

James Eskine, OPP deputy commissioner, said Cline and Miss Guest were dropped off in the city before Robert and Red showed up at headquarters.

Miss Guest joined Cline at the farmhouse while he was holding the children of Mr. and Mrs. George Field — Robert, Donald, 11, Kim, 7, and David, 4.

The gunman traded three of the children for $10,000 and an unmarked police car Wednesday afternoon.

He fled the farmhouse with Bobby, Miss Guest and Red, identified by police only as a man with a criminal record, who volunteered to drive the getaway car, a brown 1973 Dodge equipped with a police radio.

Police tracked the car on a zigzag course from Thamesford, 15 miles east of London, to the Rosedale section in central Toronto where the gunman fired at a police surveillance car.

The shooting caused no damage but police stopped following the getaway car after Cline radioed to the police dispatcher: "Get this bastard off my tail or I'll shoot the kid."

Then Bobby and Red turned up in London with the getaway car but without Cline and Miss Guest.

Deputy Commissioner Erskine said Cline faces two counts of attempted murder, four counts of abduction and charges of armed robbery, escaping custody and "possibly numerous firearm violations."

al district planner, suggested a special committee be set up to work with the governments.

Jack Holyroyd, parks superintendent, said the parks branch did not have the authority to spend money outside the park.

"But there are other government agencies which can do this," he said.

He suggested that Tofino and Ucluelet approach the provincial government for financial assistance.

"From there the province could discuss the matter with the federal government," he said.

There was some opposition at the meeting to the closure, possibly within a year, of the beach for camping.

There appeared no opposition to the use of Long Beach as a driveway for cars.

"I like seclusion," said one resident. "I like to camp on the beach alone. Why can't I do this?"

Chief park planner Peter Matrosovs of Calgary said if one person is allowed, everyone must be allowed.

"How are you going to be able to enjoy solitude if there are 10,000 other campers beside you?"

Another resident noted that other national parks allow wilderness camping.

Matrosovs observed that other parks like Banff are much larger. It has 5,120,000 acres, he said. The Long Beach area has only 33,000 acres and much is not usuable because of swamps.

Holyroyd said the Broken Islands and the lifesaving trial were for back packers, walkers and wilderness seekers.

The Long Beach area is too small, he added, and it is being developed for car-orientted visitors. The private sector would provide the camping sites outside the park.

William Turnbull, director of the western region of Parks Canada, said once a park is overused it is finished.

"You can't throw the park away and get a new one like you can a broken piece of china," he said. "Once it is ruined it remains that way."

In an interview before the meeting, chief planner Matrasovs said camping in Long Beach will continue until alternative private camping facilities are available adjacent to the park.

He said a privately-operated 500-site campground north of the park will probably open this summer, if water supply problems are resolved. If the campground is opened, the beach will be closed to automobiles and overnight caping, he said.

The Green Point campground on a bluff overlooking the park will be developed for continued use as an overnight campground, while other areas of the park will be developed for day use only.

Green Point will be the centre of development this year, if the park budget is approved by Parliament and enough skilled manpower is available to do the work.

The largest expenditure — $80,000 — will provide two kitchen shelters at Green Point. The park's popular interpretive theatre will be moved from a remote end of Long Beach to Green Point.

The present road access to Green Point campground will be relocated because of an existing traffic hazard.

Matrosovs said the Wickaninnish Beach day use area will be the site of a new beach access for foot traffic, and changing houses and a life saving station will be provided under a $192,000 budget.

Other expenditures include $100,000 for boat launching and beach facilities at Kennedy Lake, 10 miles east of the park, $95,000 for road paving and site improvement at the Radar Hill viewpoint, and $91,000 for a day use site at Grice Bay in the eastern area of the park at the site of an old sawmill.

the weather

British Columbia was mild and cloudy last night. Temperatures ranged from the high forties along the coast to the low thirties or high twenties in the interior. Rain was general along the coast and a few interior points. Some snow fell at the colder locations. A series of weather systems will move over the southern half of the province in the next few days with cloudy skies and periods of rain along the coast and some snow inland. The north will escape from the southern disturbances but shower activity will occur along the north coast and snowflurries are likely east of the coast mountains today and Friday.

Rosemary Eyes NDP Leadership

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia MLA Rosemary Brown (NDP—Vancouver-Burrard) said Wednesday she will ask her constituency association to decide whether she should run for the leadership of the federal New Democratic Party.

Brown said she expects to decide by mid-February whether to seek the post being vacated by David Lewis, who was defeated in the July 8 federal election.

Ed Broadbent, NDP parliamentary leader, has announced he will not seek the position. Selection will be made at the party's convention in Winnipeg next July.

Asked if she would abide by the decision of the association, Brown replied: "Pretty much."

Tanker Ban Lauded

By FRANK RUTTER
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — A plan by Washington state Governor Dan Evans to steer oil tankers away from hazardous inland waters was greeted with enthusiasm here Wednesday.

"Very good news," said one U.S. official who has been involved in tanker negotiations with Ottawa.

"That's really good," said a Canadian official also involved.

An aide to Senator Henry Jackson, the Washington state Democrat, said that Evans's plan was "in keeping" with Jackson's view.

Washington's other senator, Warren Magnuson, added that he is "pleased" that the governor has taken an active interest" that seemed to be in line with Magnuson's stand against increasing tanker traffic in Puget Sound.

Evans proposed state legislation Wednesday which would block construction of any new oil terminal facilities east of Port Angeles, would allow a new state agency to build an offshore terminal and a pipeline serving refineries, and establish a tax on crude oil delivered by tankers.

THE LANDLORD AND TENANT ACT:
SECURITY DEPOSITS

What IS a security deposit?

A security deposit is the money held by the landlord as security for the payment of rent in arrears, or for damages done to the residential premises.
The landlord may collect only one security deposit, of not more than half of one month's rent. And he may collect this deposit only when the tenant first rents the premises.
A landlord may not collect the last month's rent in advance, in addition to the security deposit.

What can't the money be used for?

A tenant who gives notice of termination must pay the last month's rent in full.
The tenant may not expect to pay only half of the last month's rent, and demand that the landlord apply the security deposit to the balance owing, unless both the tenant and landlord so agree in writing.

What happens to the deposit when the tenancy is terminated?

When a tenant leaves the premises undamaged and in a reasonable state of cleanliness, there's no problem—the landlord simply returns the full deposit and the accrued interest of 8% per year, within 15 days.

Where a dispute arises, every attempt should be made by both parties to resolve it in an amicable and reasonable manner.

Where an amicable agreement cannot be reached within 15 days, the landlord must turn the security deposit and the interest over to the rentalsman. A form for submission of the landlord's claim may be obtained from the Office of the Rentalsman and must be used in all cases. If the landlord's claim is less than or equal to the security deposit, the rentalsman will then mediate or adjudicate on the disposition of the money held by him in trust.

If the claim of the landlord is larger than the money held by the rentalsman, the landlord may elect to take court proceedings, but he must do so within a two-week period set by the rentalsman. If he fails to take court proceedings within that period the rentalsman will pay the money to the tenant upon an application

If you have questions regarding the Landlord and Tenant Act, please write to us.
If you have a problem requiring our immediate attention, phone.

The Making of a Bum: Sinatra Vs. the Press

I try, of course, to stick to the parish issues, as a columnist should, but I have in mind today a few words in defence of Mr. Frank Sinatra, the singer and actor and a sort of hero of mine since the world was young.

We don't see too much of it here, but anyone who has access to the American daily newspapers will know that one of the classic cases of character assassination in American history is now being mounted against a performer whose only crime has been his rugged individualism.

In paper after American paper you will find commentators exulting in the fact that Sinatra, having come out of retirement, was in obviously poor voice in his most recent recital at Madison Square Garden. There is no logic in it, whatever, but clearly this is being used vindicatively against a performer who has been notoriously non-cooperative with the press and who, in fact, has a rather lofty contempt for it.

The details of his troubles in an Australian visit, including his earthy descriptions of the news-women of that country, are being dragged out once more to document the thesis that he is America's worst travelling ambassador.

Anyone familiar with Sinatra's relations with the press may be forgiven for taking a different view. Since he first came into prominence he's been the target for the gossip-mongers, never accepted as a man with ideas. In Australia, famous for its gutter press, he was asked questions that were not merely frivolous, but embarrassing. He'd every right to categorize them as the ink-stained harlots they are.

Even in a nation such as the U.S.A. where yesterday's hero is so often tomorrow's bum it is hard to find any logical reason for the attack he's now under. At a time when most men are thinking about going out to pasture he was selected by his peers as The Entertainer of the Year. He is still far and away the most sensitive interpreter of popular music. He is a man revered in his profession for his unpublicized generosity.

It's an interesting exercise to go back through the files and to find those occasional serious interviews in which Sinatra was able to come across as one magazine editor wrote of him, as "a complex, articulate and thoughful man."

Here, for example, is Sinatra, on his communication with an audience: "You have to reach out to them with total honesty and humility. That goes for any kind of human contact, a politician on television, an actor in the movies, or a guy and a gal. That's as true in life as it is in art."

He was asked once if he had any religious feelings, if he believed in God, and replied, "I'm not unmindful of man's seeming need for faith. But for me religion is a deeply personal thing in which man and God go it alone together without the witch doctor in the middle. The witch doctor tries to convince us that we have to ask God for help, to spell out to him what we need, even to bribe him with prayer or cash on the line. Well, I believe that God knows what each of us wants and needs. It's not necessary for us to make it to church on Sunday to reach Him. You can find Him any place."

And on organized religion: "There are things which I resent. Christ is revered as the Prince of Peace, but more blood has been shed in His name than any other figure in history. You show me one step forward in the name of religion and I'll show you a hundred retrogressions. Remember that leering, cursing lynch mob in Little Rock reviling a meek, innocent little 12-year-old Negro girl as she tried to enrol in a public school? Weren't they — or most of them — devout church-goers? I detest the two-faced who pretend liberality but are practiced bigots in their own mean little spheres. I'm for decency—period. I'm for anything and everything that bodes love and consideration for my fellow man. But when lip service to some mysterious diety permits bestiality on Wednesday and absolution on Sunday—cash me out."

Long before they were popular notions in American Sinatra was advocating the recognition of China, a ban on nuclear testing and a detente with the Soviet Union.

Of the United Nations, he told an interviewer: "It seems to me that a lot of us consider the UN a private club — ours, of course—with gentleman's agreements just like any other exclusive club. I don't happen to think you can kick 800 million Chinese under the rug and simply pretend that they don't exist. If the UN doesn't represent the United Nations of the world, then what the hell have you got? Not democracy—and certainly not world government."

On nuclear testing: "I think it's got to stop and I think it will stop. Both sides have to live on this planet and leaders in all countries know that their children and grandchildren have to live here, too . . . Fear is the enemy of logic. There is no more debilitating, crushing, self-defeating, sickening thing in the world — to an individual or to a nation."

It is ridiculous, of course, to assume that Sinatra needs or wants a defence, but if ever there was an American to be honored rather than pillioried this, surely, is he.

Lock Up Guns? Impossible, Say Sellers

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald is asking the impossible when he asks gun merchants to lock up all guns overnight, spokesmen for local sporting goods shops said today.

"It's so easy for people to say, lock your guns up," said sports shop owner Ben Hill.

"But it would require a special vault that would probably cost a couple of thousand dollars."

Barry Beazley of Gordon's Sporting Goods said it would be impossible to lock up the more than 300 guns the store carries.

Macdonald Wednesday urged gun merchants to live up to the "necessities of modern society" by tightening security over firearms.

"If people want to get a gun, they'll get a gun," Hill said. Locked doors or locked cabinets won't stop them.

Doug Robinson of Robinson's sporting goods store said it would take a vault like the one in Fort Knox to store all his store's firearms each night.

However, virtually all the store's hand guns are kept in a steel vault, he said.

Neither Gordon's or Hill carry hand guns any more.

Robinson said a rash of break-ins in downtown stores has prompted his store to put a set of steel bars across the its front window, as well as steel bars across the front door.

The back door has been steel-plated for 20 years, he said.

In contrast to the specialty stores, large department stores like Eaton's and the Bay said they always lock all guns and ammunition away every night.

However, the Bay carries only about 25 guns, Eaton's between 10 and 15, spokesmen said. Neither carry handguns.

In his statement, Macdonald also urged the federal government to pass laws requiring registration of either all weapons or all gun owners.

Beazley said he thought present procedures are adequate.

Anyone buying a handgun must be registered and checked out by the police. Anyone buying a rifle or shotgun needs a firearms permit, which he can buy for $1 right at the store.

However, the store takes seriously the sale of guns, he said, and on four or five occasions have tipped police to suspicious characters who have bought guns.

Robinson said a registration law would be hopeless to enforce. The kind of person who would use a gun for illegal purposes isn't going to bother getting registered, he said.

He considers the crucial thing to be stricter enforcement of penalties for people who steal guns or use them illegally.

Besides, a registration law would require an enormous government bureaucracy, he said.

Hill said he thought registration of guns would be a useful measure, far more effective than the present $1 permit that anyone can afford.

Inquiry Asked On Water Board Work Practices

John Ranns, president of Local 598 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, said in an interview "we feel the public and us are being ripped off."

He also said recent layoffs of 29 men, including 12 this week, do not leave sufficient men — five foremen, five laborers and five equipment operators — to fix a major leak or break.

The layoff notices state the reason is no work and-or inclement weather.

But Ranns said the layoffs are not justified and not necessary because there is work and the weather is better this winter than for several years.

In addition, he said, not all the layoffs are bieng done according to seniority. A grievance is pending, he added.

Ranns charged that two major projects, replacing a cast iron main to William Head and heavy construction on a major line runnig partway into the Saanich Peninsula, were started simultaneously last summer leading to an escalation of costs because of the necessity to use rented trucks and equipment.

The union, he said, has examples of "other bad work practices" which it wants investigated by an independent outside agency.

Water district commissioner Ron Upward replied that all these points were brought up at a private meeting of the water board.

UPWARD
. . . heard nothing

He said the water board would accept an outside investigation and had offered this on a shared-cost basis but had heard nothing from the union for six weeks.

"We hope we don't build water utilities that fall apart," he said. There was no need for a large repair crew because "you don't operate on the basis of having trouble."

He said, in response to criticism of the layoffs, that "the same people have been notified every winter for the last three to four years." But Ranns said the layoffs now involve people with five to seven years seniority who have come to expect continuity of employment.

Upward also said four senior men had to be laid off because the union's contract provides lay-off protection for four members of the negotiating committee, who were less senior. "But that's their business," he added.

The crux of the dispute, he said, is "are we operating a system for the chief benefit of the staff or the public."

Relief on Way For Lone Lady

Rickman, a secretary who joined the previously all-male domain just before Christmas, has had to share with male colleagues the "very heavily used" washroom in the building, parks administrator Cliff Bate told aldermen tolay, "and the situation is both embarrassing and intolerable."

Bate requested and received approval to build a separate washroom at a cost of about $2,250. Estimates were prepared late last year but no funds were available.

★ ★ ★

In his report he said it's intended to employ more women on various aspects of park work, including the plant nursery, so the washroom will serve more than one person.

Commenting on the employment program, Bate said he noticed on a visit to England last year that women are extensively employed and prove highly efficient in parks work.

"Female bedding-out crews work in the parks," he said — and then hastily added "make that planting crews," as aldermen hooted with male chauvinist laughter.

Attacking Girl Brings 4-Year Term

An 18-year-old youth was sentenced to four years in prison today when he appeared in county court for sentencing on charges of criminal negligence causing bodily harm, indecent assault, and theft of an auto.

In handing the sentence to Richard Wayne Steele of 1040 Rockland, Judge J. C. Bowk warned the "serious consequences" drinking drivers can expect to face if their actions result in the injury of another person.

Steele was charged Nov. 19 with attempting to run over another youth with a car the previous evening and to indecently assaulting a young girl two hours later.

Bowk noted Steele has a prior conviction for criminal negligence in Vancouver in April 1974 for which he received a $400 fine.

"Obviously he didn't learn any lesson then," he said.

The judge called Steele's "unprovoked assault" on a young girl walking on a city street and threats he was carrying a gun an "equally distressing action" which won no sympathy from the court.

"This kind of conduct and complete disregard for society cannot be tolerated," he said.

Referring to evidence read in the trial that Steele had been drinking heavily that evening, Bowk said "drunkenness does not excuse the crime."

He said it was fortunate no one was seriously injured or killed in the incidents.

Bowk sentenced Steele to four years on the indecent assault charge, noting the maximum penalty under the Criminal Code is five years.

On the criminal negligence charge he imposed a three-year term and, on the theft charge, six months.

The Code allows maximum penalties in each case of 10 years.

All sentences will run at the same time.

Steele had orignally been charged with attempted murder and rape but the former was reduced to criminal negligence causing bodily harm following a preliminary hearing before Judge William Ostler in Victoria provincial court Dec. 17.

The rape charge was reduced to indecent assault at the start of Steele's trial in county court this week. He pleaded guilty to all charges.

"The basic purpose of the Criminal Code is to protect society," Bowk said, adding he had taken into account a number of factors in sentencing, including the gravity of the offence, the deterrent effect and the maximum penalties allowed under the Code.

Smith said outside the court later he would "seriously consider appealing the case."

WOMAN DIES

Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre has called an inquest for 7 p.m. today at Sands' Mortuary here in the death of Mrs. Georgia Head of Galiano Island.

The 62-year-old pedestrian died Tuesday from head injuries received Saturday night when hit by a car as she crossed the patricia Bay Highway near Beacon Avenue.

It was the fifth traffic fatality in the Greater Victoria area since the start of 1975.

Stop the Shouting, Pollen Tells Tourist Groups

Victoria's two tourist bureaus should stop shouting at each other and sit down and settle their problems quickly, Mayor Peter Pollen said Wednesday.

"It seems typical of Victoria that groups shout at each other at long range instead of engaging in mature discussion to settle problems."

The problems of the two tourist bureaus revolve around money — or the lack of it.

The Vancouver Island Publicity Bureau, under Sam Lane, gets government and private funds — and spends the money mainly on advertising Vancouver Island in other provinces and in the United States.

The Visitors Information Centre, under Terry Farmer, gets local municipal grants and private funds — and spends the money on services to tourists after they arrive.

Lane this week charged the local information centre was withholding funds that should go to the Vancouver Island bureau.

Farmer said it wasn't true.

The mayor said regardless of what is true or false, right or wrong, the two sides should sit down and talk out their troubles "in a mature and responsible manner."

Farmer said he was willing to talk if his directors approved but that did not mean his group necessarily would change its stance.

The main problem has been that both groups would have to conduct fund drives among local merchants to get revenue in the form of membership fees.

Lane argues it makes no sense to have two fund drives and is willing to leave the field clear to the local bureau but wants a cash grant from the bureau to make up the difference.

In this way both groups would receive cash but there would be only one fund drive.

However, Farmer replies that there is no way the local bureau can make direct grants to the senior body because the local bureau is not supposed to use its cash for external promotion of Victoria.

Farmer said the pledge was made to the four core municipalities when the new Visitors Information Centre was formed last March. All grants to the information centre are supposed to be used for services to tourists after they arrive.

"Maybe the municipalities want to change their mind, I don't know. But right now our hands are tied."

The only alternative, says Farmer, is for Lane's group to conduct its own campaign for funds in this area.

That would be an unnecessary duplication of effort and annoying to local merchants, according to Lane.

Lane points out that the local bureau used to make a $12,000 grant — but that was before the new regime.

The former Victoria Visitors Bureau went out of business in September, 1973, again in a dispute over funding. City council had donated $60,000 a year but insisted the bureau should raise funds itself as well. City funding was reduced and a fund drive launched but it fell short of its target.

The bureau folded.

In March, 1974, a new group of directors headed by Farmer launched the Victoria Information Centre. The four core municipalities promised to make moderate fund contributions provided the centre raised most of its cash itself and the money was not used for external promotion, which should be left to the Vancouver Island bureau.

Farmer said its membership drive has been very successful and as a result its request for civic funding will be reduced to under $15,000 this year from $19,000 in 1974 and far below the $60,000 the former bureau requested from city council.

The problems of the local bureau have been solved, he says, but concedes there remains the problem of local funding of the Vancouver Island bureau.

South Koreans To Vote

SEOUL (WP) — President Park Chung Hee Wednesday announced a national referendum within a few weeks to validate his rule in the face of growing opposition. He said he would resign from office if the vote goes against him.

Like a previous referendum which backed his role a few months after his seizure of unchecked power, the forthcoming balloting evidently will be held under tightly-controlled conditions. A little-noticed law adopted by cabinet decree nearly two years ago prohibits any expressions of opinion by public, press or politicians about referendum issues, and bars political party members from acting as ballot box observers.

Opposition reaction was immediately negative. on grounds that the vote will be neither free nor fair under present conditions. The major opposition New Democratic Party scheduled a meeting to take an official stand.

The splinter-group Democratic Unification Party denounced the plan, even before the official announcement, as a "sinister scheme" to extend Park's power.

The Korean Christian Student Federation, most of whose national officers are imprisoned for opposing Park's rule, demanded that political prisoners be released prior to a national vote, and called for revisions in the referendum rules.

FBI Cannot Purge Its Files

WASHINGTON (AP) — Clarence Kelley, director of the United States Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI), says he cannot legally purge the agency's files of derogatory and unproven allegations against members of Congress.

He said in an interview Wednesday he has no plans either to suggest or to oppose legislative changes restricting the future collection of such material or allowing destruction of that already in the files.

"I can only say we abide by the law and will abide by any restrictive legislation," Kelley said.

Kelley and other officials said that the FBI, like all government agencies, cannot destroy official records without specific written approval from national archivist James Rhoads.

Rhoads' deputy, James O'Neill, agreed that present laws would not permit the destruction of most records kept by the FBI on members of Congress and others.

A House of Representatives judiciary subcommittee has scheduled hearings beginning Jan. 30 on the FBI practice of keeping information about members of Congress. The subcommittee may consider legislative changes.

Kelley acknowledged that some of the unproven allegations in the files deal with the personal lives of members of Congress.

He noted that the files contain data on congressmen who have been the subjects of criminal investigations and on those who have been considered for other federal jobs.

The files also contained 22 years' worth of biographical and campaign material on congressmen which agents gathered from public sources in a program designed to acquaint FBI officials with new congressmen. L. Patrick Gray stopped the program when he was FBI acting director in 1972, but the law thwarted his efforts to destroy the material.

Helms Explains CIA Role

WASHINGTON (WP)—Former CIA Director Richard M. Helms was quoted as telling the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Wednesday that if there was CIA infiltration of American radical groups, it occurred without his knowledge.

Sen. Gale W. McGee (D-Wwy.) who gave that report, said the three-hour closed hearing was devoted almost entirely to questioning Helms about his previous congressional testimony.

It was unclear how Helms related his statement that he was unaware of any CIA involvement in domestic spying.

After the hearing Wednesday four commitee members who commented publicly said they were satisfied with Helms' testimony on the CIA's controversial role in this country and Chile.

Sen. John Sparkman (D-Ala.) Foreign Relations Committee chairman, called Helms' answers "full and frank." "As far as I'm concerned, I'd be glad for this to end it," Sparkman said in regard to the committee's questioning of Helms.

CIA Director William E. Colby, Helms' successor as head of the super-secret intelligence agency, last week acknowledged that the CIA had spied on American journalists and political dissenters, opened the mail of private citizens, panted informers inside domestic protest groups and assembled the agency's own secret files on more than 10,000 Americans.

Helms said that the CIA, which he headed from 1966 to 1973, had not been involved in any wrongdoing.

The Making of a Bum: Sinatra Vs. the Press

I try, of course, to stick to the parish issues, as a columnist should, but I have in mind today a few words in defence of Mr. Frank Sinatra, the singer and actor and a sort of hero of mine since the world was young.

We don't see too much of it here, but anyone who has access to the American daily newspapers will know that one of the classic cases of character assassination in American history is now being mounted against a performer whose only crime has been his rugged individualism.

In paper after American paper you will find commentators exulting in the fact that Sinatra, having come out of retirement, was in obviously poor voice in his most recent recital at Madison Square Garden. There is no logic in it, whatever, but clearly this is being used vindictively against a performer who has been notoriously non-cooperative with the press and who, in fact, has a rather lofty contempt for it.

The details of his troubles in an Australian visit, including his earthy descriptions of the news-women of that country, are being dragged out once more to document the thesis that he is America's worst travelling ambassador.

Anyone familiar with Sinatra's relations with the press may be forgiven for taking a different view. Since he first came into prominence he's been the target for the gossip-mongers, never accepted as a man with ideas. In Australia, famous for its gutter press, he was asked questions that were not merely frivolous, but embarrassing. He'd every right to categorize them as the ink-stained harlots they are.

Even in a nation such as the U.S.A. where yesterday's hero is so often tomorrow's bum it is hard to find any logical reason for the attack he's now under. At a time when most men are thinking about going out to pasture he was selected by his peers as The Entertainer of the Year. He is still far and away the most sensitive interpreter of popular music. He is a man revered in his profession for his unpublicized generosity.

It's an interesting exercise to go back through the files and to find those occasional serious interviews in which Sinatra was able to come across as one magazine editor wrote of him, as "a complex, articulate and thoughful man."

Here, for example, is Sinatra, on his communication with an audience: "You have to reach out to them with total honesty and humility. That goes for any kind of human contact, a politician on television, an actor in the movies, or a guy and a gal. That's as true in life as it is in art."

He was asked once if he had any religious feelings, if he believed in God, and replied, "I'm not unmindful of man's seeming need for faith. But for me religion is a deeply personal thing in which man and God go it alone together without the witch doctor in the middle. The witch doctor tries to convince us that we have to ask God for help, to spell out to him what we need, even to bribe him with prayer or cash on the line. Well, I believe that God knows what each of us wants and needs. It's not necessary for us to make it to church on Sunday to reach Him. You can find Him any place."

And on organized religion: "There are things which I resent. Christ is revered as the Prince of Peace, but more blood has been shed in His name than any other figure in history. You show me one step forward in the name of religion and I'll show you a hundred retrogressions. Remember that leering, cursing lynch mob in Little Rock reviling a meek, innocent little 12-year-old Negro girl as she tried to enrol in a public school? Weren't they — or most of them — devout church-goers? I detest the two-faced who pretend liberality but are practiced bigots in their own mean little spheres. I'm for decency—period. I'm for anything and everything that bodes love and consideration for my fellow man. But when lip service to some mysterious diety permits bestiality on Wednesday and absolution on Sunday—cash me out."

Long before they were popular notions in American Sinatra was advocating the recognition of China, a ban on nuclear testing and a detente with the Soviet Union.

Of the United Nations, he told an interviewer: "It seems to me that a lot of us consider the UN a private club — our's, of course—with gentleman's agreements just like any other exclusive club. I don't happen to think you can kick 800 million Chinese under the rug and simply pretend that they don't exist. If the UN doesn't represent the United Nations of the world, then what the hell have you got? Not democracy—and certainly not world government."

On nuclear testing: "I think it's got to stop and I think it will stop. Both sides have to live on this planet and leaders in all countries know that their children and grandchildren have to live here, too . . . Fear is the enemy of logic. There is no more debilitating, crushing, self-defeating, sickening thing in the world — to an individual or to a nation."

It is ridiculous, of course, to assume that Sinatra needs or wants a defence, but if ever there was an American to be honored rather than pillioried this, surely, is he.

Lock Up Guns? Impossible, Say Sellers

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald is asking the impossible when he asks gun merchants to lock up all guns overnight, spokesmen for local sporting goods shops said today.

"It's so easy for people to say, lock your guns up," said sports shop owner Ben Hill.

"But it would require a special vault that would probably cost a couple of thousand dollars."

Not only that, putting the guns away every night would require an hour's work, plus another hour to take them out in the morning, Hill said.

Barry Beazley of Gordon's Sporting Goods said it would be impossible to lock up the more than 300 guns the store carries.

Macdonald Wednesday urged gun merchants to live up to the "necessities of modern society" by tightening security over firearms.

"If people want to get a gun, they'll get a gun," Hill said. Locked doors or locked cabinets won't stop them.

Doug Robinson of Robinson's sporting goods store said it would take a vault like the one in Fort Knox to store all his store's firearms each night.

However, virtually all the store's hand guns are kept in a steel vault, he said.

Neither Gordon's or Hill carry hand guns any more.

Robinson said a rash of break-ins in downtown stores has prompted his store to put a set of steel bars across its front window, as well as steel bars across the front door.

The back door has been steel-plated for 20 years, he said.

In contrast to the specialty stores, large department stores like Eaton's and the Bay said they always lock all gukns and ammunition away.

However, the Bay carries only about 25 guns, Eaton's between 10 and 15, spokesmen said. Neither carry handguns.

In his statement, Macdonald also urged the federal government to pass laws requiring registration of either all weapons or all gun owners.

Beazley said he thought present procedures are adequate.

Anyone buying a handgun must be registered and checked out by the police. Anyone buying a rifle or shotgun needs a firearms permit, which he can buy for $1 right at the store.

However, the store takes seriously the sale of guns, he said, and on four or five occasions have tipped police to suspicious characters who have bought guns.

Robinson said a registration law would be hopeless to enforce. The kind of person who would use a gun for illegal purposes isn't going to bother getting registered, he said.

He considers the crucial thing to be stricter enforcement of penalties for people who steal guns or use them illegally.

Besides, a registration law would require an enormous government bureaucracy, he said.

Hill said he thought registration of guns would be a useful measure, far more effective than the present $1 permit that anyone can afford.

Inquiry Asked On Water Board Work Practices

A union spokesman called Wednesday for a special inquiry into the work practices of the Greater Victoria Water District.

John Ranns, president of Local 598 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, said in an interview "we feel the public and us are being ripped off."

He also said recent layoffs of 29 men, including 12 this week, do not leave sufficient men — five foremen, five laborers and five equipment operators — to fix a major leak or break.

The layoff notices state the reason is no work and-or inclement weather.

But Ranns said the layoffs are not justified and not necessary because there is work and the weather is better this winter than for several years.

In addition, he said, not all the layoffs are being done according to seniority. A grievance is pending, he added.

Ranns charged that two major projects, replacing a cast iron main to William Head and heavy construction on a major line runnig partway into the Saanich Peninsula, were started simultaneously last summer leading to an escalation of costs because of the necessity to use rented trucks and equipment.

The union, he said, has examples of "other bad work practices" which it wants investigated by an independent outside agency.

Water district commissioner Ron Upward replied that all these points were brought up at a private meeting of the water board.

UPWARD
. . . heard nothing

He said the water board would accept an outside investigation and had offered this on a shared-cost basis but had heard nothing from the union for six weeks.

"We hope we don't build water utilities that fall apart," he said. There was no need for a large repair crew because "you don't operate on the basis of having trouble."

He said, in response to criticism of the layoffs, that "the same people have been notified every winter for the last three to four years." But Ranns said the layoffs now involve people with five to seven years seniority who have come to expect continuity of employment.

Upward also said four senior men had to be laid off because the union's contract provides lay-off protection for four members of the negotiating committee, who were less senior. "But that's their business," he added.

The crux of the dispute, he said, is "are we operating a system for the chief benefit of the staff or the public?"

Relief on Way For Lone Lady

Rickman, a secretary who joined the previously all-male domain just before Christmas, has had to share with male colleagues the "very heavily used" washroom in the building, parks administrator Cliff Bate told aldermen tolay, "and the situation is both embarrassing and intolerable."

Bate requested and received approval to build a separate washroom at a cost of about $2,250. Estimates were prepared late last year but no funds were available.

★ ★ ★

In his report he said it's intended to employ more women on various aspects of park work, including the plant nursery, so the washroom will serve more than one person.

Commenting on the employment program, Bate said he noticed on a visit to England last year that women are extensively employed and prove highly efficient in parks work.

"Female bedding-out crews work in the parks," he said — and then hastily added "make that planting crews," as aldermen hooted with male chauvinist laughter.

Attack on Girl Brings 4-Year Term

An 18-year-old youth was sentenced to four years in prison today when he appeared in county court for sentencing on charges of criminal negligence causing bodily harm, indecent assault, and theft of an auto.

In handing the sentence to Richard Wayne Steele of 1040 Rockland, Judge J. C. Bowk warned of the "serious consequences" drinking drivers can expect to face if their actions result in the injury of another person.

Steele was charged Nov. 19 with attempting to run over another youth with a car the previous evening and to indecently assaulting a young girl two hours later.

Bowk noted Steele had a prior conviction for criminal negligence in Vancouver in April 1974 for which he received a $400 fine.

"Obviously he didn't learn any lesson then," he said.

The judge called Steele's "unprovoked assault" on a young girl walking on a city street and threats he was carrying a gun an "equally distressing action" which won no sympathy from the court.

"This kind of conduct and complete disregard for society cannot be tolerated," he said.

Referring to evidence read in the trial that Steele had been drinking heavily that evening, Bowk said "drunkenness does not excuse the crime."

He said it was fortunate no one was seriously injured or killed in the incidents.

Bowk sentenced Steele to four years on the indecent assault charge, noting the maximum penalty under the Criminal Code is five years.

On the criminal negligence charge he imposed a three-year term and, on the theft charge, six months.

The Code allows maximum penalties in each case of 10 years.

All sentences will run at the same time.

Steele had orignally been charged with attempted murder and rape but the former was reduced to criminal negligence causing bodily harm following a preliminary hearing before Judge William Ostler in Victoria provincial court Dec. 17.

The rape charge was reduced to indecent assault at the start of Steele's trial in county court this week. He pleaded guilty to all charges.

"The basic purpose of the Criminal Code is to protect society," Bowk said, adding he had taken into account a number of factors in sentencing, including the gravity of the offence, the deterrent effect and the maximum penalties allowed under the Code.

Smith said outside the court later he would "seriously consider appealing the case."

WOMAN DIES

Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre has called an inquest for 7 p.m. today at Sands' Mortuary here in the death of Mrs. Georgia Head of Galiano Island.

The 62-year-old pedestrian died Tuesday from head injuries received Saturday night when hit by a car as she crossed the Patricia Bay Highway near Beacon Avenue.

It was the fifth traffic fatality in the Greater Victoria area since the start of 1975.

Stop the Shouting, Pollen Tells Tourist Groups

Victoria's two tourist bureaus should stop shouting at each other and sit down and settle their problems quickly, Mayor Peter Pollen said Wednesday.

"It seems typical of Victoria that groups shout at each other at long range instead of engaging in mature discussion to settle problems."

The problems of the two tourist bureaus revolve around money — or the lack of it.

The Vancouver Island Publicity Bureau, under Sam Lane, gets government and private funds — and spends the money mainly on advertising Vancouver Island in other provinces and in the United States.

The Visitors Information Centre, under Terry Farmer, gets local municipal grants and private funds — and spends the money on services to tourists after they arrive.

Lane this week charged the local information centre was withholding funds that should go to the Vancouver Island bureau.

Farmer said it wasn't true.

The mayor said regardless of what is true or false, right or wrong, the two sides should sit down and talk out their troubles "in a mature and responsible manner."

Farmer said he was willing to talk if his directors approved but that did not mean his group necessarily would change its stance.

The main problem has been that both groups would have to conduct fund drives among local merchants to get revenue in the form of membership fees.

Lane argues it makes no sense to have two fund drives and is willing to leave the field clear to the local bureau but wants a cash grant from the bureau to make up the difference.

In this way both groups would receive cash but there would be only one fund drive.

However, Farmer replies that there is no way the local bureau can make direct grants to the senior body because the local bureau is not supposed to use its cash for external promotion of Victoria.

Farmer said the pledge was made to the four core municipalities when the new Visitors Information Centre was formed last March. All grants to the information centre are supposed to be used for services to tourists after they arrive.

"Maybe the municipalities want to change their mind, I don't know. But right now our hands are tied."

The only alternative, says Farmer, is for Lane's group to conduct its own campaign for funds in this area.

That would be an unnecessary duplication of effort and annoying to local merchants, according to Lane.

Lane points out that the local bureau used to make a $12,000 grant — but that was before the new regime.

The former Victoria Visitors Bureau went out of business in September, 1973, again in a dispute over funding. City council had donated $60,000 a year but insisted the bureau should raise funds itself as well. City funding was reduced and a fund drive launched but it fell short of its target.

The bureau folded.

In March, 1974, a new group of directors headed by Farmer launched the Victoria Information Centre. The four core municipalities promised to make moderate fund contributions provided the centre raised most of its cash itself and the money was not used for external promotion, which should be left to the Vancouver Island bureau.

Farmer said its membership drive has been very successful and as a result its request for civic funding will be reduced to under $15,000 this year from $19,000 in 1974 and far below the $60,000 the former bureau requested from city council.

The problems of the local bureau have been solved, he says, but concedes there remains the problem of local funding of the Vancouver Island bureau.

Frozen Feet Don't Deter Happy Jogger

WINNIPEG — Ken Weldrick, of Vancouver, part-way through a planned four-month jogging trip across Canada, has found out the hard way about the hazards of the Prairie winter. The 23-year-old jogger was snoozing outdoors near Moosomin, by the Manitoba-Saskatchewan border, when the worst blizzard in several years struck 12 days ago.

"I usually sleep on the side of the highway in my sleeping bag," said Weldrick. "When I woke up, I was covered in snow and my feet were frozen."

The frostbite, which also hit his ears and nose, slowed him up temporarily but hasn't deterred him from his target of reaching St. John's, Nfld., by April 1.

"Some people may think I'm crazy and sometimes I think they are right," said Weldrick, who reached Winnipeg Wednesday. "But I'm not giving up."

NORRISTOWN, Pa. — When a local bank president learned that many of his customers could not repay loans because they were unemployed, he decided to do something about it. He got them jobs.

John Carr, president of Suburban Bank, recently called a meeting of his consumer loan department staff to discuss the bank's delinquent loan customers.

"We're in the money-making business," he told them. "But it doesn't do much good to harass a customer for payment if the poor guy isn't working.

The next day Carr discussed the problem over lunch with Edward Meister, president of Transicoil Inc., of nearby Worcester. Meister said he had openings on his night shift. That same night Norreen Lawless, manager of the loan department, called delinquent loan consumers and found 87 were unemployed. She contacted local merchants and within three days placed 22 bank customers in new jobs.

"So far nobody has rejected our offer," Lawless said.

WASHINGTON — Richard Nixon's legal defence fund, almost broke after paying another $20,000 in lawyers' fees, is appealing to foreign contributors for help in raising $1 million to aid the former United States president.

Rabbi Baruch Korff, head of the President Nixon Justice Fund, handed the $20,000 cheque Wednesday to a secretary for the Washington law firm representing Nixon in a range of legal entanglements.

It brought to $100,000 the legal fees paid by the fund since Nixon resigned Aug. 9, Korff said.

LAS VEGAS — A jury here has found a 26-year-old Canadian guilty of first-degree murder in the knife-torture slaying of a San Jose, Calif., couple. The verdict against Lloyd Paulette of Edmonton was returned Wednesday. The jury also recommended that Paulette serve a life sentence in the Nevada state prison without possibility of parole. District Judge Joseph Pavlikowski scheduled formal sentencing for Feb. 23.

TORONTO — Farley Mowat says he has lost about $50,000 in royalties because the Coles bookstore chain has imported United States editions of three of his books and is selling them at cut-rate prices. Pierre Berton, another Canadian author, estimates his royalty losses at $5,000 for the same reason.

FOOD GIVEAWAY

TORONTO — About 1,200 people showed up at the Regent Park housing development parking lot Wednesday as the Salvation Army distributed 10 tons of silver hake, a cod-like whitefish donated by a local fish wholesaler.

The breaded, portioned fish was purchased a year ago by D. McIntyre fish wholesalers, who expected to sell it to institutional customers. They bought 20 tons at about 50 cents a pound.

However, the portions were uneven and the fish wouldn't sell, so the wholesaler gave the hake to the Salvation Army.

The Salvation army distributed three tons to its institutions, then slipped notices offering free fish under doors in the Regent Park development. A limit of one 10-pound box per person was imposed so that no one would be turned away.

TIME, READER'S DIGEST

Tax Privileges Abolished

OTTAWA — Time magazine and Reader's Digest will be stripped by the end of the year of special tax privileges which allow them to compete with Canadian periodicals, State Secretary Hugh Faulkner announced today.

Faulkner told the Commons the Income Tax Act will be amended to withdraw the provision which permits Time and Readers's Digest, alone among foreign magazines, to share with Canadian publications a tax deductibility provision on advertising.

Canadian firms advertising in Canadian magazines are allowed, in calculating income tax, to deduct the costs of these advertisements at 100 per cent.

Under present law they can do the same with the cost of their advertisements in Time and Reader's Digest, which are foreign magazines.

The minister also said the Income Tax Act would soon be amended so Canadian advertising on U.S. border television stations beaming into Canada will no longer be deductible from a sponsor's income tax.

In this area, the main company affected by the proposed changes is KVOS-TV, a Bellingham-based station which derives most of its revenue from Vancouver advertisers.

Dave Mintz, president of the company, told The Times from Vancouver today that he did not feel the proposed changes would have the desired effect.

"It's not going to put us out of business," he said.

"All we'll do is readjust our rates to cover the tax difference and still be sold out of advertising time. "It'll hurt the advertiser more than us."

Mintz expressed "hurt" at the way the change was announced.

"We've been in B.C. since 1953," he said, "and tried to act as we felt the government wanted.

"We've hired Canadians, and our executives are all Canadians or landed immigrants. we've reinvested our profits in Canda and what's more we've paid Canadian income tax — not U.S. — on every cent of revenue we've made in Canada."

Faulkner said that when the special tax concession was implemented, it was designed to encourage development of a magazine industry in Canada, but the industry is still U.S.-dominated.

TAXPAYERS TAKE POOL PLUNGE

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The Canadian taxpayer could end up paying as much as half the cost of Prime Minister Trudeau's $200,000 swimming pool.

This was revealed Wednesday when it became known that the anonymous group of donors who are paying for the pool will be able to claim the donations under the gift tax provisions of the Income Tax Act.

If all 25 of the donors are in a sufficiently-high income tax bracket this will lop a considerable amount from the bite they pay the federal treasury.

A spokesman for the donors, Dr. W. H. Fader of Toronto confirmed Wednesday that some of the donors were aware that they could claim a tax deduction before they made the commitment to the pool.

Two MPs, meanwhile, tried without success to determine in the Commons Wednesday exactly who is paying for the pool.

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) called for an investigation to determine the names of the private donors financing the 20-foot by 40-foot enclosed pool.

His motion, requiring unanimous consent to come to a vote, was lost in a chorus of "Nos" from Liberal MPs.

A similar attempt by Tom Cossitt (PC—Leeds) was ruled out of order by Speaker James Jerome.

Knowles said outside the Commons that the public has a right to know who the contributors are and whether any potential conflict of interest might occur.

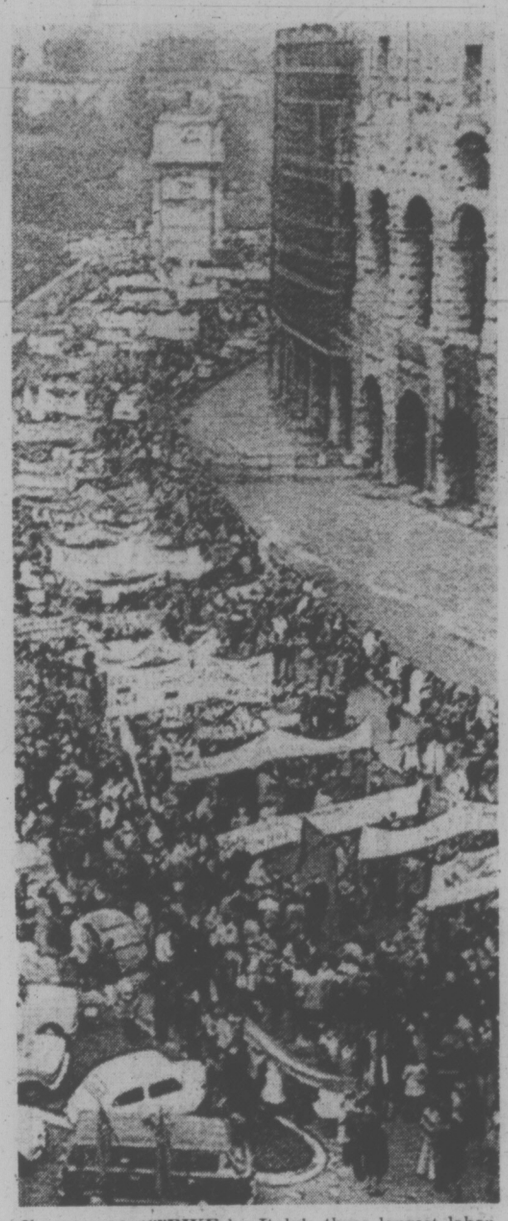
Trudeau said last week he does not know, and does not want to find out, who the donors are.

Officials say the pool will serve Trudeau and future prime ministers.

Knowles said the pool should be financed with public money to eliminate suspicion.

It was just as wrong for Trudeau to accept a privately-financed pool as it was for Health Minister Marc Lalonde to accept a free trip to Israel on a Seagram's Distillers jet last year, he added.



NATIONAL STRIKE by Italy's three largest labor unions creates massive traffic jams in Rome but fails to have much other effect. Crowd estimated at 200,000 marches past the Colosseum today on its way to a rally to press demands for cost-of-living and pension increases as well as a guaranteed annual wage.

CIA Spies 'In Canada'

TORONTO (CP) — Edmonton publisher Mel Hurtig said Wednesday that at least 50 spies from the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) of the United States have worked in Canada with the full knowledge and co-operation of the RCMP.

Mr. Hurtig, founder of the Committee for an Independent Canada, told the local committee chapter that the CIA also has field officers working as attaches and counsul-generals in Toronto, Calgary and Vancouver.

He said a Canadian security organization—the police and security planning and analysis group—knows about the operations and they "open their files" to the CIA.

Mr. Hurtig said Col. Robert Bourne, assistant deputy minister in charge of the security group which is under the federal solicitor-general's department, "regularly makes his secret files available to the CIA."

He said in an interview later that his information about the RCMP, the CIA and Col. Bourne will be given to Solictor - General Warren Allmand today.

He produced a typewritten list which he said contained names of all CIA agents "working under the guise of legal or cultural affairs at U.S. consulates in Canada."

Mr. Hurtig refused to reveal the names, which he said were given to him Wednesday by a Montreal newspaper, saying the paper planned to print the list next Thursday.

Although Mr. Hurtig would not reveal the source of his information, he said it came from a friend with a high-level contact inside the police and security group.

He said Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau misled the public when he declared three years ago that there were no CIA agents in Canada.

"Anyone who believes that the CIA would not infiltrate a country like Canada where the U.S. has enormous assets, is very naive," the publisher said.

He said the remedy to the infiltration is for the RCMP "to do its job."

Canada's police and security planning and analysis group was set up three years ago to receive and evaluate information from the RCMP, the armed forces and external affairs.

NEWS BRIEFS

Swarm of Quakes Rattles California

BRAWLEY, Calif. (UPI) — A "swarm" of strong earthquakes jolted southern California early today, less than 12 hours after another milder tremor shook residents of Santa Monica and Malibu.

The swarm, the term used by seismologists for a series of quakes, began at 4:30 a.m. and ranged in magnitude from 3.7 to 4.3 on the Richter Scale, according to the seismology laboratory at Caltech in Pasadena.

Mortgage Rate Cut

OTTAWA (CP) — Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. (CMHC) reduced its mortgage lending rate today to 10¾ per cent from 11¼ per cent for loans to house buyers under the Assisted Home Ownership Program (AHOP).

Weekly Pay Rises

OTTAWA (CP) — Average weekly earnings of more than four millon workers rose 13.8 per cent during the 12 months to November last year, outstripping the 12-per-cent increase in consumer prices in the corresponding period, Statistics Canada reported Wednesday.

More Families Move

ASBESTOS, Que. (CP) — Another 25 families are expected to move out today after four homes slithered into a 950-foot open-pit asbestos mine Wednesday. About 50 families were evacuated earlier. A seven-block area of the town's main street has been blocked off and police are guarding against the looting of abandoned homes.

Mint Talks Break

OTTAWA (CP)—Negotiations between the Royal Canadian Mint and the Public Service Alliance, representing 550 striking workers, broke off again Wednesday. The employees have been on strike since Jan. 9 in mint offices at Ottawa, Hull, Que., and Winnipeg and the walkout has halted production of coins.

U.K. Vote on ECM

LONDON (UPI)—Prime Minister Harold Wilson plans to call a natonal referendum this summer to dicide whether Britain should remain in the nine-nation European Common Market. Government officials said Wilson will announce plans for the referendum this afternoon in a statement to parliament.

ENOUGH!

In council debate on granting $143 to Vancouver Island Publicity Bureau, Coleman said:

"The philosophy is this — do we want any more people wandering around the Island? I say the answer is a firm no." He said there are "too many people on the Island already. We should be looking at ways to keep tourists away."

He was the only objector and the grant — up $33 over 1974 — passed council.

Municipal Lockout Not for 2 Weeks

A lockout of Greater Victoria municipal and school board employees appears impossible for at least two weeks.

Mediation officer Clark Gilmour has tentative meetings scheduled for this period with almost all the groups involved in current bargaining for new contracts.

He submitted his report to Labor Minister Bill King Wednesday regarding the city outside workers but not in the other disputes.

A decision by the municipalities and school board to lock out all employees if there is a single strike cannot be implemented until the mediation officer has withdrawn, according to the Labor Act.

The 280 city outside workers, members of CUPE Local 50, have posted strike notice and will be free to strike as soon as King notifies the local he has received Gilmour's report.

Local 50 president Jim Walker said no decision has been made when to strike the city and no decision will be made until King says he has received Gilmour's report.

King is expected to communicate receipt of Gilmour's report within a few days.

Gilmour is still the mediation officer in disputes involving the Greater Victoria school board, Victoria inside staff, Capital Regional District, Saanich, Sidney, Esquimalt and Oak Bay.

He said the cheques should have been delivered this morning but workers were told they would get them at 4 p.m., after banks closed. He said he was contacting the labor department about this.

However, a payroll department spokesman said Walker's accusation was "rubbish."

"He's talking through his hat. We had a breakdown in the computer last night. They worked last night, corrected it, the cheques were run this morning and they've all been delivered," he said.

Record Donations To USC Campaign

The Unitarian Service Committee annual campaign in Greater Victoria, sponsored for the past 21 years by the Victoria Times, has been officially closed with a record total of contributions — $21,427.39.

That surpasses the best previous year by almost $5,000.

But it falls a little short of the target, which was $22,785, the cost of buying, insuring and shipping a 36,000 - pound carload of powdered milk to famine-struck Bangladesh.

"May I, through you, send a jubilant, very, very warm 'thank you' to all your readers who dipped into their pockets to send lifesaving Canadian milk to the starving children in Bangladesh."

Contributions, big and small, came from all corners of the community. A note with a recent donation of $5 reads simply:

Despite an official end to the campaign, there is a chance the total could yet hit the target.

A UVic professor who wishes to remain anonymous has challenged students to contribute $500. If they do, he will add $100 and is confident other faculty members will donate as well.

Since 1953, Times readers have contributed a total of $239,622.95.

EXXON PROFIT LEAPS

NEW YORK (AP) — Exxon Corp., the world's biggest oil company and parent company of Imperial Oil of Canada, announced today fourth-quarter 1974, after-tax earnings climbed 9.3 per cent.

Earnings for the full year were up 28.5 per cent over 1973.

The quarter's net income totalled $860 million, or $3.84 a share, compared with $787 million, or $3.51 a share, in the fourth quarter of 1973—the time when Middle East producers first imposed their oil embargo against the United States and petroleum prices began their upward spiral.

Revenues rose 49 per cent to $12.57 billion, against $8.42 billion in the comparable period last year.

For the full year ended Dec. 31, Exxon said it earned $3.14 billion, or $14.03 a share, compared with 1973's $2.44 billion, or $10.90 a share.

Refunds Under Fire

The provincial consumer services department has again launched an attack on the escalating number of instant income tax refund firms, cropping up around B.C.

Consumer Services Minister Phyllis Young Wednesday predicted a dramatic increase in the number of people using the refund firms this year because of deteriorating economic conditions.

She said she will push for the federal government to introduce legislation cutting refund firms "off at the knees" or outlaw the tax refund scheme.

In the meantime, her department is hoping that complaints against the firms will be reported for eventual court action under the Trade Practices Act.

Main complaint is that many of the firms offering "instant" tax refunds give customers only 50 per cent of what the actual refund should be.

A department spokesman said the new scheme is for the firm to give a customer a $50 advance at the time he submits his tax claim. The remainder is directed to the claimant only after the refund is received.

David Morris, department staff solicitor, said the scheme could be interpreted as a loan for which the interest rate can be as high as 4,000 per cent.

Morris cites the example of a person who is entitled to a $500 return who could get as little as $250 from the tax firm.

The firm gives the customer an initial $50 cash and he (the customer) is told that he will get the rest when his refund arrives from Ottawa. At that point the final payment could be only $200.

"In effect, the person pays $250 for a $50 loan for six weeks," Morris said.

Knight Seeks Unemployment Insurance

Dr. Stanley Knight, deposed director of the education department's research and development division, will start receiving unemployment insurance benefits in late February.

Knight filed his application for benefits today and was told he would start receiving $113 a week on Feb. 21.

During his six months as division director he received $498 a week.

Under the terms of unemployment insurance, Knight must seek three jobs a week, and he told reporters he listed his preferences as director of a research and development division, president of a university, or dean of education.

Gov't Aid Sought By Park Villages

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

UCLUELET — Tofino and Ucluelet spokesmen Wednesday demanded senior government assistance to help the heavily burdened villages provide services to the thousands of visitors to the Long Beach section of Pacific Rim National Park.

The plea was made at a public meeting attended by officials from Parks Canada regional headquarters in Calgary. The meeting — and another tonight at Tofino — was held to discuss this year's development plans at Long Beach.

The federal parks branch plans to spend $3.2 million on the whole of the park which includes the Broken Islands and the West Coast Trail between Bamfield and Port Renfrew.

Of this sum, $1.7 million will be for land acquisition within the park at Long Beach and the Broken Islands.

In addition, $1.1 million will be used for upgrading park facilities at Long Beach.

Despite these expenditures, aldermen and mayors of the two communities said the senior governments are not helping the villages cope with the annual influx.

Ken Gibson, deputy mayor of Tofino, said the village faces a severe water problem.

"Why should we pay to improve our water services for people who come to visit the park," he asked.

Ucluelet Mayor Bob Russell said that basically residents are involved in logging and fishing.

"We haven't the funds to pay the expenses for sewage and garbage disposal for all the people who come here."

AMIN ASKS QUEEN TO AID OVERTHROW

Times News Services

KAMPALA — Idi Amin wants to go to London to help overthrow the British government — and he wants the Queen to help him.

Radio Kampala Wednesday said that Amin had told the Queen of his planned August visit "so that you may have ample time to arrange all that is required for my comfortable stay in your country."

During the visit he intends to tour all parts of the United Kingdom "to talk to those people who are struggling for self-determination and independence from your political and economic system," the broadcast quoted him as telling the Queen.

Officials in London Wednesday night denied receiving any communication from Amin about any projected visit.

'Why Not' Buttons Sexist, Say MPs

By IAIN HUNTER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Two female Liberal MP's are angrily campaigning against the button which Health Minister Marc Lalonde is peddling to help liberate Canadian women.

Simma Holt (Vancouver-Kingsway) and Iona Campagnolo (Skenna) won't wear theirs and they're not afraid to say "Why Not."

She charged that Lalonde has been misled into endorsing the button by his "office full of surrogate wives."

"I consider it to be sexist in tone," declared Mrs. Campagnolo a little more delicately.

The two B.C. MP's said Wednesday that none of the Liberal women in the House of Commons are wearing the button bearing the slogan "Why Not," and they appear to be intimidating their male colleagues to ditch theirs as well.

Even Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, who made a statement in the Commons Wednesday supporting International Women's Year, was not wearing the button given to him by his own health minister.

Detractors of the button claim that the "Why Not" could be taken as an invitation to something other than equality of status.

Mrs. Campagnolo said the button could be taken as having "a sexual connotation."

Both she and Mrs. Holt felt Trudeau was expressing sympathy for their anti-campaign but telling them it was too late to pull back the button.

Meanwhile, unaware that his campaign was going sour in the capital, Lalonde was distributing buttons as fast as he could in the Northwest Territories.
